GOV. VANCE'S SPEECH.

THE RELATIONS BETWEEN NORTH CAROLINA AND THE CONFEDERACY.

We have already referred to a great speech delivered at Wilkesboro, N. C., on Feb. 22, by Gov. VANCE. The peculiar position of the speaker, and the significance of this utterance, make the appended extracts from this speech of great interest. After alluding to the suffering the people had endured in consequence of the war, Gov. VANCE said:

In consequence of this continued suffering, which experience had not prepared the people to endure with the fortitude displayed by some nations who have been nurtured to the shock of war, a certain discontent had been perceived, and a funeral gloom hung over the community, expanding, if we credit all we hear (frequent in the State, a notion that we must have a convention—that we must secede from the Southern Confederacy; that we must repudiate the whole thing, and go back to our first work over again.

Our destinies, fellow-citizens, have now been cast in another Government; and although, as you all know, I regretted to go out of the former Government and was one of the last to lay it down, and did lay it down with the same mournful feelings with which I followed my dear father to the grave, I never intended, and do not now expect, to see it resurrected again. Our convention, composed of delegates fresh from the people, by the most solemn votes entrusted me, as an honorable people to a cause, have pledged their all to its support. May God aid us in the faithful discharge of this obligation in the future as in the past to the letter. The act was a deliberate expression of public sentiment—though it may have been wrong. The Government we selected is ours, as much so as are our own children. The spirit of patriotism is akin to the love of our offspring, which God has implanted in us—the highest, holiest sentiment of humanity. A man should love his home if for nothing else but because it is his and shelters him; he should love his wife if for no other reason than because she is his wife; he should love her, not because it is his—a part, as it were, of his being; he should love his country, right or wrong—not for the mistaken idea that it needs his support, but because in its destiny are involved the welfare of State, community, home, wife, children, self. But if you have no other reason to give for defending it, say you do so because it is your country.

The speaker stated that he was desirous of presenting all the various aspects of the question, and said: Now, what is it you desire above all other present earthly good? [Voices—Peace, peace; we all want peace.] I know you do. Everybody wants

PEACE.

Peace, blessed peace! Why, the man who does not desire peace is unworthy of existence. Peace! It is one of the highest and holiest attributes of Deity; so much so, that our blessed Saviour, Jesus Christ, was called the Prince of Peace. The great Apostle Paul said of the highest character of peace—"the peace of God—that it passeth all understanding." Now, if you really want peace, this great blessing to repose upon our bleeding country, your sons to return from the battle-field and take their position again in the family circle, commerce and agriculture to resume their beneficent sway, the plowshare to take the place of the sword, and industry again to stretch her magic wand over the war-beaten fields till they bloom as a garden, I suppose, as reasonable men, you are willing to take the best plan to obtain this consummation so devoutly wished. Which is the best plan?

Gov. VANCE then discussed the proposition to have a and showed first that under the Constitution (of the Confederacy such a body could do nothing to secure peace. He proceeded: "Now you see that the Constitution your delegates have sworn to support, expressly provides that the power to declare war and make peace shall be vested in the President and Senate of the Confederacy; and the moment one of your delegates makes a proposition or proffers a treaty of any kind to the enemies of his country, he is a traitor by the law, and has forsworn himself. [Applause.] Tend to no, not because I say it, but because it is written in the Constitution we have all agreed to support. If you do not intend to instruct your delegates to take your State out of the Confederacy, you see from this aspect of the question, your convention assembled can do nothing more toward realizing the end in view than your Legislature or your Governor can accomplish. It can't turn a wheel.

Well, suppose you go a little further and say you will instruct your delegates to take the State out of the Confederacy, because when it is out it is relieved from the obtrusive of the Constitution, and rests upon a separate and independent basis. Supposing, also, that it is not your design to join the United States Government again, but only to go out as an independent sovereignty, for the purpose of securing peace to yourself and possibly effecting the same desirable end for all parties. Well, you pass an ordinance—make another exercise of this political heartbeat too—and nothing I know of is more bitter unless it is a boycott decoction—[laughter]—and set up for yourselves. Is that going to give you peace? Will that restore your sons and fathers to their homes? Will that hush the cry of the orphan and dry the widow's tears? Will that fill your land with plenty and prosperity? So far from it, I can assure you, my fellow-citizens, that secession from the Confederacy will involve you in a new war, a bloodier conflict than that you now deplore. "But," you may say, "Mr. DAVIS and his Government will not dare to make war on a sisterly State, because the right of secession is guaranteed in the Constitution of the Confederacy." So it is, my friends; but you see by that time you have thrown off the Constitution, you have gotten from under its obligations, and sworn you would have nothing to do with it. Do you expect the Confederacy to be bound by a document you refuse to recognize as affecting yourselves? So soon as you announce to the world you are a sovereign and independent nation, as a matter of course the Confederacy has the right of declaring war against you for sufficient cause, equally with the right she holds of declaring war against England, France or Holland. This right is inherent in all sovereignties.

But what would Uncle ABRAHAM say to it—that old gentleman whose personal pulchritude has been the subject of so much remark, [laughter,] and who, they say, can tell more bad jokes than Pean? [Laughter.] How would he receive the intelligence that North Carolina had seceded from the Confederacy and set up on herself? He would put his thumb up to his nose and make certain gyrations and evolutions with his fingers, and say, "Well, ole North Carolini, I'm tremendous glad for see yer come outer JEFF. DAVIS' little concern, I know; but yer don't mean for to say yer gone to the Union again, and under the protection of the last Draft the world ever saw. Bless yer too long for let yer march out that way." [Continued laughter and applause.] Why, of course, if such a proceeding on the part of North Carolina would secure her independence, it would only be necessary for one State to secede at a time to get herself acknowledged, and after all were out, turn round and form such a Confederacy as most pleased them. Old ABRAHAM is fighting us not because we are a part of the Southern Confederacy, but because we are in rebellion in the old Union, and so long as we refused obedience to him he would continue to fight us. The idea that LINCOLN would recognize or abate his claim to allegiance and obedience, is preposterous. Well, would the Southern Confederacy recognize your independence and make a treaty of peace with you? This is entirely owing to contingencies. If you went out of the Confederacy and declared yourself independent, you would have to announce and enforce your position of neutrality with reference to the other belligerents, or there would be occasion for war. How could you preserve your neutrality when once announced? The only railroad communication between the armies of Gen. LEE and of Gen. JOHNSON, between Virginia and the southwestern Confederacy, is through North Carolina. You do not suppose we could, as a neutral State, permit the Government at Richmond to communicate across our territory with its Southwestern armies. Gen. LEE sends some of his veterans down here, takes possession of the railroads—the very arteries of the Confederacy—and flags anybody who interferes with him, and so you have two wars instead of one! There is another consideration involved. A great portion of the provisions that feed Gen. Lee's army are obtained in North Carolina. As a neutral State would not sell them, and he would be forced to leave them. It is not difficult to foresee how speedily North Carolina would become the seat of war.

Suppose your State should to-morrow secede from the Confederacy, what would become of your soldiers in the army? Home would run away and come home, no doubt; but the mass of them who have followed that old battle flag through smoke and fire, into the presence of death, and waved its tattered folds upon the heights of an hundred fields of triumph, amid the cheers of victory that thrill an applauding world—do you suppose that they would trample it under foot and crawl upon their bellies and eat dirt in that sort of style? [Great applause.] Who then would you have to defend North Carolina? A few old men and some militia officers.

Gov. VANCE then drew a picture of

as follows:

"Suppose, as the last alternative for obtaining peace, your convention should take the State out of the Confederacy and put it into the arms of Lincoln. Just so soon as you entered into the old Union and swore to support the Government, just so soon would you have imposed on you your share of the debt, taxes, burdens of the United States. Instead of the Confederate tax collector coming around to gather up Confederate currency, (of which it must be confessed there is no great lack in the land,) the Federal agent comes among you demanding 'greenbacks' and gold to assist in carrying on the war. Instead of getting your sons back to the plow and fireside, they would be drafted and sent into the service of Uncle Sam, to fight alongside of his negro troops in exterminating the white men, women and children of the South. Is there anything very desirable about such a peace as that? Extend your suppositions into the domains of absurdity, and conceive of the North Carolina soldiers basely deserting their comrades in arms, in obedience to the proclamation of your Governor. Why, gentlemen, they would not come home in peace to you. They would have to fight with their new friends, and would just cross from the Southern to the Northern side of the Rappahannock, and their rifles would be pointed at the bosoms of the brave men who have fought by their sides through the fierce fire of a three years' war? Would that give you peace?

To think of these glorious North Carolina regiments—you have seen them in the first flush of martial enthusiasm—you know them now unflinching, though sustained but by honor and duty; many of them filled with your sons—these regiments that have followed the Southern Cross over so many fields already made classic by their prowess, astonishing the world, and raising the nations on tiptoe in admiration of their heroic achievements—shall they be asked to fraternize with the miserable scoundrels who have slaughtered our people, devastated our homes, and even inflicted the crowning outrage which demons from hell pale at, on our mothers and sisters; shall they be asked to join those wretches in desolating the homes of the very men by whose sides they have so long fought and suffered? I know you would not think of the proposition. I think I can assure you to-day, with all candor and all honesty—as a dying man to dying men—in the presence of God—that any step of this kind you take will only involve you in a deeper and bloodier war. The calamities of war affect our people to a terrible degree; streams of tears are running down the cheeks of many a poor woman; cries for bread come from many a suffering child. But let us trust that the God of battles, who gave to our ancestors through seven long years a cloud by day and a pillar of fire by night, will yet lead us into the land where grows the fruitage of liberty, richer than the cluster of Eschol, and through which flows the milk and honey of independence and nationality. [Applause.]

I have not, fellow-citizens, enumerated all the consequences which would follow inconsiderate action on your part. What would become of the currency should you abandon the cause of the Southern Confederacy? It is bad enough already; but every bank in the State is filled with it, and would be broken and worthless to-morrow in such an event. Widows, soldiers' families and orphan children have no other kind. Commercial and financial ruin, compared to which the present suffering on account of the depreciation of the currency would be insignificance itself, would overwhelm you. What would become of the gallant soldiers who have been maimed and mutilated in the service—those one-legged and one-armed boys, incapacitated for labor? Having once submitted ourselves to the enemy, you might see one of them come up, his cheeks wan with suffering, his rags fluttering in the breeze, his wasted form supported on crutches, and ask the Government for support. The reply would be: "You infamous rebel, have you the impudence to ask support from a government you have been fighting to destroy? No. You will get no pension; but we will tax as heavily as we can your little potato patch to pension the man who maimed you for life, desolated your home, burned your house, insulted your mother." Could you endure such a spectacle?

Let us not cease to remember that we all consented to this war—old line Whigs as well as Secessionists. We consented after it appeared inevitable, and we must all stand up to it—every man, woman and child throughout the length and breadth of the Southern Confederacy. We must forget, if possible, for awhile, the causes that led originally to this rupture, and each man take upon his shoulder the full measure of burden and responsibility, regardless of consequences. [Applause.]

But suppose, fellow-citizens, we could forget all these considerations of honor, glory, decency, and resolve that we would see what terms we could get from the United States. What does the enemy offer you? You are all well aware that when a man sets out to make a bargain he makes everything just as alluring as he possibly can; he presents his goods in the best possible light, and says the most flattering things to induce you to accept his offer. Well, the same policy pertains to diplomacy. When an ambassador or diplomatist is trying to get another to acquiesce in certain measures, he clothes his proposition in the most plausible language he can, and presents the most advantageous terms he can possibly offer to induce negotiations. Possibly some of you know men who would do better by a friend than they promised to do, but I do not think the majority of you ever heard of them. Can any of you put your finger on a man who has done more for you than he bargained? If it is so hard to find one in the circle of your acquaintance, who is the name of Heaven can tell me of a Yankee who ever gave you more than he agreed to? [Applause.] The difficulty is to make him stand up to his bargain. Voices—"That's so."

WHAT LINCOLN OFFERS TO THOSE WHO SUBMIT.

Now, what does Mr. LINCOLN promise the State of North Carolina? In what language does he clothe his gracious terms of pardon and amnesty? He says if one-tenth of the people of any State will take an oath to support—what? The Constitution? Nay, take an oath to support his proclamation abolishing Slavery, his proclamation inciting the slaves of your State to burn your home and murder you and your families! If you swore to support this proclamation you would perjure yourself; for it is in direct violation of the Constitution, as you well know. Old AAR has perjured himself, and he wishes to put you in the same category of villainy. Not only must you swear to endure his infamous document—so pronounced by the civilized world—but you must also take an oath to support all the acts of Congress which have been passed—abolishing Slavery, confiscating your property, placing you in subjection to one-tenth of the community, and publicly executing your glorious chieftains and every officer from a Colonel up to Gen. LEE.

When the United States Congress last met, LINCOLN was called upon, by the pressure of public sentiment, to propose some terms of peace to the "rebels" of the South—to advance the greatest inducements that could be possibly proffered to secure their return to the Union; and after long consideration, amid all the pressure of the peace element in the North, in and out of Congress, the best proposition that could be offered was to support one-tenth of the Southern community who would swear to assist in the confiscation of the property of the remaining nine-tenths, set free the negroes, and hang every man whose bravery has elevated him above a certain rank, every man whom you have seen fit to place in civil office. What! Deliver up to the malignity of an unrestrained foe, at whose deeds now, in the face of our immense armies, and checked by fear of retaliation, humanity is livid with horror, the glorious heroes whom our sons have followed through so many trying scenes, and who have made for us a record of glory as resplendent as history's ample page, "rich with spoils of time," has ever enrolled! [Prolonged applause.]

Let no man say this is a fancy sketch. Do not say Old Abe is joking; that he will certainly do better than that. I pledge you my existence he would not do half so well. Do you not see how artful he is even while offering us so little. He wants to breed this very civil war which I am here to-day to warn you against. He wants to set up a government within the Government of North Carolina, composed of one-tenth her population. Our voting population is about 100,000. They want to set up a government of 10,000 perjured scoundrels who are unworthy to lick the dust off the feet of the poorest soldier in our army; and to support it with the bayonet, and to set the people to slaughtering each other. You are not fools enough to fall into that trap. You do not need any warning upon that subject, although I have given it.

WHAT IS TO BECOME OF YOUR NEGROES?

There were four millions of them in the Southern Confederacy at the commencement of the war. They are all to be turned loose upon us if we consent to the only terms Mr. LINCOLN offers us. They cannot go to the North. I would almost be willing to send them to Massachusetts. [Laughter.] I think they would elevate the tone of its society very much. [Laughter.] Indeed, I think every darkey sent from this country for robbing henroosts and stealing hogs would be a missionary to that depraved and God-forsaken country. [Continued laughter.] But they would not receive them—for they are so determined on shutting out anything which might improve their moral condition, and thereby disturb their swindling "calculations"—they have, in common with every Northern State, passed laws prohibiting free negroes from settling within their limits. Let us see what would be done with these millions of blacks, as already indicated by the acts of the enemy; and I will only cite to you one case, of which there are hundreds of illustrations, all pointing to the same dreadful result. In the little village of Beaufort, S. C., situated in the sea island cotton districts, from which the inhabitants were expelled, the land has been recently laid off into lots of twenty acres, and put up for sale.

Gov. VANCE then read an account of one of these sales from a Southern paper, and proceeded:

Your lands confiscated and sold to your own slaves!

Now you see what is in store for you. This is but the beginning of what would be the end. If they do this in the green tree, what will they not do in the dry? If they do this at the very moment they have the impudence to proffer you terms of peace, what will they not do when our vast armies are disbanded, when the battle-flag is laid low in the dust, and the gallant men who have for three years stood as a wall of fire between you and destruction, no longer periodically send a thrill of guilty awe through the enemy who listens for their avenging tread across his fields, but melt away before the unimpeded rush of the greedy conquerors?

I tell you, my fellow-citizens, if we could consent to this thing we would deserve the fate of dogs; but we would not get even that, for dogs are allowed to sleep under their master's floor, and to eat the crumbs that fall from their master's table. [Cheers.] You would get nothing. [A voice—"Kicks."] Yes, you would get kicks, and until you would wish you had died a man rather than live to become a dog. [Applause.]

THE OLD ORDER OF THINGS AND THE NEW.

There is only one more proposition to consider under this head. It is a favorite idea with a great many, that possibly the old order of things could be restored; that our rights under that Constitution could be guaranteed to us, and everything move on peacefully as before the war.

My friends, there are a great many desirable things, but the question, not what may be wished, but what may be obtained, is the one reasonable man may consider. It is desirable to have a lovely wife and plenty of pretty children, but every man can't have them. I tell you now candidly, there is no more possibility of reconstructing the old Union and reinstating things as they were four years ago, than exists for you to gather up the scattered bones of your sons who have fallen in this struggle, from one end of the country to the other, reclothe them with flesh, fill their veins with the blood they have so generously shed, and their lungs with the same breath with which they breathed out their last prayer for their country's triumph and independence. [Immense applause.]

was not merely a physical juxtaposition, a constitutional agreement; it was a moral Union. The cement of confidence was what held it together so long. The tendrils of affection which grew from a common soil of national memories of past glory wreathed its tall columns with a beauty passing fair. Does this confidence exist now? It has gone forever. It has disappeared beneath the fiery hoofs of war that have trampled our fair fields into desolation. It is lost in the smoke of burning cities, and will be talked of no more by the hearthstones that now lie heaped with the charred rafters and the cinders of the ashes. The bloody hands that have dug up the bones of our ancestors and searched the sacred dust in their hellish lusts, have buried it where plummet can never sound nor the trump of resurrection awaken it into renewed existence. [Cheers.] It has finally gone forever, blotted out by the members of the Congress of the United States, who have recorded the deliberate intention of exterminating the people of the South, and supplanting them with a better race—God save the mark!—a better race!

Can the pious mother pray that her children may be brought to associate with the men who make the Word of God contraband of War? Will the son seek to give the brotherly kiss to the murderer of his father, the outrager of his sister, the slaughterer of his people, the desolater of his land? Not while the faintest spark of mankind glows in his bosom. [Applause.]

There is another aspect of the question to which I wish to call your attention, and one which deserves much consideration. I desire you to mark my prediction. There never can be peace on the continent of North America until the North and South are independent and distinct nations. There might be a temporary peace, such a peace as you have seen effected by overpowering a gallant man, putting manacles upon his limbs, and throwing him into a dungeon; such a peace as exists until he wrenches the bars, scales the walls, and strikes terror into the hearts of his enemies when they dream they are most secure. You would have such a peace as Poland has to-day.

Do you suppose the chivalrous people of the South, whose distinct moral nationality has long since been recognized, would submit to see all their proud cities to see the lands of their friends divided up and parceled out among the foreign mercenaries? Do you suppose the blood of the Southern youth would run quietly in his veins when he saw a negro officer walking the streets and making his sister give way for him, or insulting her by his very presence? Do you suppose this kind of peace would long endure? No, insurrection after insurrection, revolution upon revolution, war after war would burst upon the country, and for year after year, century after century, as in Europe, the States in victims would be demanded and blood flow in torrents, compared to which a drop would have at first won independence and permanent peace. The only way to obtain continued peace—and I want no other—is to FIGHT IT OUT NOW.

GARRISONED WITH NEGRO SOLDIERS,

[Applause.] To fight it out now, while we have a Government, and great and glorious armies in the field. If we do fight, we will leave war as an inheritance to our children's children. We will leave this terrible question for our little boys to settle when we have passed, and under circumstances far different and advantages far less than we now possess for asserting their rights, their race and nationality.

If you think, fellow citizens, as a great many of you do, that proper efforts have not been made during this warfare to obtain the peace which you desire, why, there cannot be any earthly objection to such efforts being made. I have been in favor of them myself, and from time to time have so advised the President. If you think our Government should tender the olive branch of peace and let no occasion pass, why, fellow-citizens, as a matter of course, let it be done. But I beg you to recollect that there is a lawful and legal way pointed out by the Constitution of your country, and any effort you make in this way will be right and proper. Other modes of procedure will only place you in a false position and do your country an injury.

Gov. VANCE then proceeded to discuss the substitute question, and argued the justice of the law passed by Congress abolishing the system. He then turned to the consideration of the

and said: "There is a great deal said about the danger of the military authorities overcoming the civil. Well, I acknowledge all that. There is danger. But there was never yet a war where the same danger did not arise, and especially a war like ours, that taxes the whole energies of the people, that permeates every strata of society, and is the sole business of the day. We may forget, in the midst of the pomp and circumstance of the war, that we have civil rights and constitutional liberties. I have striven against this danger as much as any man in the country. We must all strive against it. But if we undertake to go out of the Southern Confederacy on this account, and go to Mr. LINCOLN to get these rights, I think it would be the part of prudence, to say the least, while we are simmering and frying, and the under side done pretty brown, to look over into the coals and estimate their temperature. We might be glad enough to get back into the pan, hot as it is. [Applause and merriment.]

I hardly think we could find much protection for civil liberty in the dominion of Abraham the First. There is talk of the writ of habeas corpus being suspended in the Southern States. I understand it has already been suspended by Congress; but the suspension of this writ may not be in contravention of the Constitution; for the courts have decided that Congress can suspend the writ within certain limits.

I regret to see the suspension of the writ. It is evidence of wrong existing somewhere, either of a desire upon the part of the Government to assume more authority than belongs to it, or of a state of affairs in some parts of the country that argues ill. But in the same of common sense, if we are a law-abiding people, if we regard the king's name as a tower of strength, we must not make a commotion because a law has been enacted which our jurists announce as within the limits of the Constitution of the country that we have sworn to support. We ought to be willing to stand up to our own Constitution and our own laws. If they are improper, if they are hard upon us, let us instruct our Representatives to repeal them and give us better ones."

Gov. VANCE next drew the following sketch of what the rebels have done and "what LINCOLN can do." He said:

A good many people have gotten "out of heart." Many men say it is not worth while for our seat to be slaughtered any longer; that the enemy have gotten the advantage of us; they have got numbers, they have got wealth, they have got munitions of war; sooner or later the weak must come down before the strong, and we had better make terms while we can, and so on.

WHAT THE NORTH STATE HAS DONE.

To show you what has been and can be accomplished, provided we have faith in ourselves, I will tell you a little of what this State has done on her own hook. When I came into the chair I now occupy and fill with so much grace and dignity, [a laugh,] there were not five suits of clothing to be found in the Quartermaster's Department. Now we have sixty thousand suits of ready-made clothing awaiting the needs of our troops. We have thirty thousand blankets, shoes, &c. In fact, our boys have so many good clothes that I understand they trade them off for liquor sometimes. [Laughter.]

Will you set a limit to our energy after I tell you, among a hundred other things, that in the little town of Tarboro', in this State, are made canes of keen, glittering, surgical instruments, requiring the highest degree of mechanical skill in their production? They will compare favorably with the best specimens of European manufacture. Almost every man I see here to-day is well clothed in the product of our own looms; and the ladies, God bless them, look in their homespun prettier than ever they did. We will soon be commercially independent of the whole world. We had originally, including the States we claim, a population of eight million white people and four million blacks. Now we number not more than five million white people.

HOW MANY TROOPS

do you suppose ABRAHAM has sent down against us? In April, 1861, LINCOLN called for 75,000 men. One month later he called for 64,000. From July to December (the old fellow began to get warm) he called for 500,000. In July, 1862, he called for 300,000; in August, 1862, he called for 300,000; in 1863 he drafted 300,000, and has a draft now pending for 500,000 more, making in all about 2,039,000 men he has called for to send down upon us—almost half as many soldiers as we have men, women and children in the Confederacy. Their locality is about as questionable, if they have all started South, as the passengers on a train at a smash-up, described by a darkey who was illustrating the difference between a stage-coach and railway accident: "If de stage turn over, dare you is; but if de cars runs off, whar is you?" [Laughter.] Where are those immense masses? If we have actually whipped and driven back two million soldiers, there is encouragement to hope we can drive back all he can possibly send against us. But if these two million troops have never been raised, there is encouragement to believe Mr. Lincoln is trying to scare us by making a show of strength that does not exist, and that the North is just about as tired of the war as we are. So the view is encouraging from either standpoint.

But we know there have been immense numbers hurled against us. Three hundred thousand troops, armed, equipped, and furnished to the highest degree that the skill and wealth of the United States could supply—surpassing in this respect any army that ever took the field in Europe—and under seven different commanders, have tried to march from Washington City to Richmond, and over half of the way furnishing water facilities for transportation. If they are precisely where they were two years ago—no nearer Richmond than they were at the start. And the bones of the Yankees that bleach on the plains of Northern Virginia, if piled in a row, would make a manadamized road from Richmond to Washington, over which the artillery of the Southern Confederacy could roll between the two cities. [Applause.] We know that, notwithstanding all the immense levies made recently at the North, Gen. MEADE is afraid of Gen. LEE, and skulks within his fortifications. If he makes no more progress toward Richmond than he has for some time past, he will not reach that goal of Yankee hopes before twelve o'clock on doomsday.

Why, fellow-citizens, it is not worth while to be scared. We scare them about as badly as they scare us. [Voices, "Go it VANCE."] Well, I am going it, old fellow, and I hope we will all "go it" until the war is over.

Gov. VANCE concluded his elaborate oration by appealing to his hearers to encourage their soldiers in the field in every way and to stand by the President.

SMITH'S CAVALRY EXPEDITION.

ACCOUNT OF FORREST'S EXPLOITS.

From the Richmond Dispatch, March 9.

The recent victory of Gen. FORREST in Northern Mississippi, by which the grand plan of the Yankees in the West was so effectually defeated, was one of the most remarkable achievements of this war. We have conversed with gentlemen recently from that section, whose accounts all concur in the main facts of that almost marvelous exploit. The enemy's reports fully confirm these accounts, but they do not state the exact force by which these results were accomplished. Owing to the exhaustion of his horses, the want of arms and munitions and other causes, FORREST could array a force of only 2,400 men to confront SMITH and GRIERSON's column of 7,000 of the best equipped cavalry the Yankees have ever put in the field. FORREST's men, too, were mostly new and untried, especially in the cavalry service. He had recently recruited them in West Tennessee. It seemed the extreme of rashness and recklessness, to attempt with such a force to arrest the march of a column of seven thousand splendidly mounted and equipped men, led by experienced officers, whose march thus far had been uninterrupted, who were buoyant and confident, and were charged with such an important mission. The junction of this cavalry force with SHERMAN at Meridian, was the key of the whole scheme of the Yankee plan for the occupation and subjugation of the Southwest. If successful, SHERMAN would have been in a condition to advance upon Demopolis and Selma, or Mobile; and these important points, as well as the rich countries adjacent, would have been at the mercy of the enemy. They could only have been driven back at the enormous risk of weakening JOHNSTON's army, so as to open Northern Georgia and Rome and Atlanta to GRANT's army. Gen. FOLK, with his scant infantry force, quickly perceived the momentous issue, which depended upon the result of the cavalry movement from Memphis, and after securing his small army on the east side of the Tombigbee, and removing all his supplies and munitions and returning to Mobile the troops he had borrowed from Gen. MAURY, sent imperative orders to LEE and FORREST to unite their forces, and at every cost to crush and drive back SMITH and GARRISON's cavalry.

LEE did not receive these orders in time to reach FORREST with his force, which was already greatly exhausted by the continuant skirmishing with SHERMAN's columns. FORREST was therefore left alone with his 2,400 men to perform this immense undertaking. Confronting the enemy on the broad prairies near West Point, on the Tibbee River, he prepared for action. The enemy formed in a long and most imposing line, outflanking FORREST, and threatening the instant demolition of his small and imperfectly organized force. The charge was given, and the Yankees advanced with great boldness and an air of certain victory. Great was their surprise when, as they approached FORREST's line, they observed his men slip from their horses, and, converting themselves into infantry, each man taking the most favorable position, availing themselves of every advantage the ground afforded, and awaiting with the utmost coolness the impetuous charge of the Yankee chivalry. On came the confidently mounted dragoons, under those far-famed Yankee chiefs, SMITH and GRIERSON, with such fierce displays of valor and determination as argued badly for FORREST's infantry scouts, scattered through the bushes and over the prairie in rather an irregular and unmilitary style. But these valorous horsemen did not advance far before the balls of two thousand riflemen began to rattle through their ranks with fearful effect. Scores of men and horses fell at the first fire, and their onward movement was checked, and before they could recover and return the volley was repeated—again and again—until dismay and terror began to prevail in their ranks, and they soon broke into confusion and fled.

FORREST then mounted his men and began his pursuit, which he kept up with great vigor for nearly twenty miles, the enemy leaving behind many of his wounded and exhausted men, all his dead, his horses, prisoners, five pieces of artillery, burning his packs and turning loose his mules. Having discovered the small force of FORREST, several attempts were made by SMITH and GRIERSON to rally their men and resume the offensive. Their efforts were successful on the hills just beyond Okolona, when the last grand charge was made by them. It was met in the same way as their previous attempts, but even with more vigor and determination by FORREST's men, who had in a few hours become veterans. Several crushing volleys from their rifles quickly arrested the impetuous valor of the Yankees, and sent them to the rear in the wildest confusion and dismay. By this time FORREST had exhausted his ammunition and the strength of his horses. He could not follow up the enemy.

Fortunately, however, Gen. STEVENS arrived with some fresh State troops, new levies hastily gathered, and took the place of FORREST's men—following up the Yankees for a great distance, harrassing them, capturing and killing and wounding many and picking up arms, wagons, horses and a great variety of other valuable property thrown away by the enemy in his wild flight. The enemy never halted for a moment in his retreat, and when last heard from the remnant of this splendid force was hastening fast to Memphis in far different plight from that in which they had so recently emerged from their fortifications. As soon as the news of this disaster reached SHERMAN, he began his retrograde movement toward the Mississippi, LEE following him up and hanging on his flanks and harassing him continually. When last heard from he was dragging his wearied, broken-down column back to Vicksburg, in a demoralized state, the most mortified, disappointed and disgusted chief who ever led ten thousand men up the hill and then marched them down again.

To increase this feeling of mortification and disgust, SHERMAN's conscience was burdened with a load of infamy which, even upon a Yankee General, would have pressed lightly, in the recollection of the shocking outrages upon private property, in the destruction of mills, of the houses of poor, ingenuous people living near his line of march, and in the shameful excesses of his wretched marauders. We could hardly wish our bitterest enemy a larger portion of misery than must have fallen upon this ambitious aspirant on his return to the fortifications to Vicksburgh. An educated soldier, who had long associated with gentlemen, who had received the highest favors and unbounded kindness and hospitality from the Southern people, during his residence in Louisiana, SHERMAN has, by the license extended to his brutal hirelings, in their march through Mississippi, and by his own acts of outrage and cruelty, shown a degree of infamy that entitles him to take rank with BUTLER, McNEIL, BURRAS, and other Federal chiefs whose only achievements in this war have been those of the ruffian, the pirate, the plunderer and highwayman.

PRICES AT MOBILE.

From the Mobile Register,

The odd frenzy with which useless articles were jerked down from shop shelves and paid for in Confederate treasury notes was of short duration. People, after squandering considerable means in this manner, commenced reflecting, and this reflection was a death-blow to extortion. The operation of the currency not was simple enough, but at first the people were so alarmed that they did not stop to understand it, but in desperate haste each threw his money on the market with the cry of sauve qui peut; fearful lest the printed "promise to pay" would fade and disappear before the holder could rid himself of it. This was the harbinger of a rich harvest for the sharp ones, and to-day many a luckless wight mourns his sacrifices. We have never known another business community like this, so subject to senseless excitement and panic, and a few sharply inculcated lessons like the present will have a wholesome effect, and in vulgar parlance, send us an "eye-opener." Sugar and bacon were run up to $5 per pound, calico rapidly unfolded itself at $15 a yard, gold from $19 jumped intermediate figures and passed up to $23, $28 and $30 in some instances. This was less than a week since. When we look at the market to-day one feels constrained to exclaim:

"What a falling off is there, my countrymen."

Not a drygoods store is now swept by half-a-dozen skirts in a day. Sugar is again at the old price, tobacco finds no sales at former figures, calico shrinks down 85 on the yard, while gold has had such a violent fall as to be kicking at $200@$21. For those who have been bitten by the purchase of coin, we have no antidote to recommend for the extraction of the virus other than an instant sale and quick funding.

FROM YAZOO CITY.

The following was received at the War Office last evening:

DEMOPOLIS, ALA., March 11, 1864.

To Gen. Cooper:

Gen. LEE telegraphs that ROSS and RICHARDSON attacked Yazoo City on the 5th, capturing many stores and destroying much cotton, about being shipped. The enemy retired to the city, and held it until reinforced. They were driven out of the city, which was recaptured while stores were being destroyed. We have quite a number of prisoners. Our loss was about fifty killed and wounded. The enemy still occupy Yazoo City and Liverpool, intrenching at the latter place. SHERMAN issued a general order at Canton, in which he speaks of many regiments in his army entitled to furlough.

R. POPE, Lieut.-General.

THE WOMEN.

From the Richmond Dispatch.

The spirit and courage displayed by the women of the Confederacy in the presence of danger and death are worthy of the heroic race to which they belong. It is no idle boast to say that if there were not men enough to fight our battles, the mothers, wives and daughters would take the place of the fallen brave. But whilst such a contingency is not probable, it would be well, in view of the horrid purposes disclosed in the Dahlgren papers, for every Southern woman to provide herself with the protection of a revolver, or some defensive weapon, to keep at bay ruffians who are insensible to any other consideration but their personal safety. It often happens that our Southern ladies are exposed to the insults and violence of the brutes who are invading us, and with no male protection at hand, and in that event they ought never to be without some efficient means of defence.

THAT TORPEDO.

The Mobile Register learns that Lieut. DIXON, who blew up the Housatonic on the night of the 17th February, was either lost or captured by the enemy on his return. A dispatch was received in Mobile on the morning of March 1, stating that he was last seen heading in the direction of Fort Sumter, between which and himself were two lines of the enemy's picket boats. It was expected that his fate would be ascertained by the next flag of truce.

THE TRANSFER OF SEAMEN.

Important Regulations of the War Department.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
WASHINGTON, March 4, 1864.

Section seven of the act approved February 24, 1864, provides as follows:

"And any person now in the military service of the United States who shall furnish satisfactory proof that he is a mariner by vocation, or an able seaman, or ordinary seaman, may enlist into the Navy, under such rules and regulations as may be prescribed by the President of the United States: Provided, That such enlistment shall not be for less than the unexpired term of his military service, nor for less than one year. And the bounty money which any mariner, or seaman, or ordinary seaman, enlisting from the army into the navy, may have received from the United States, or from the State in which he enlisted in the army, shall be deducted from the prize money to which he may become entitled during the time required to complete his military service; And provided further, that the whole number of such transfer enlistments shall not exceed ten thousand."

The following regulations are prescribed by the President of the United States to carry this act into effect:

The Secretary of the Navy designates the whole number, not exceeding twelve thousand, which it is desirable to have at each of the several naval stations fixed upon by him, as follows, namely:

At Cairo, Ill.	1,000
At Boston	2,000
At New-York	3,000
At Philadelphia	2,000
At Baltimore	1,000

To facilitate as much as possible the execution of the law above cited, it shall be the duty of every officer commanding a company, and of every officer commanding a recruiting rendezvous or depot, to forward all the applications made to him for transfer by seamen or ordinary seamen of his company or detachment, together with the proof that the applicants are mariners by vocation, or able or ordinary seamen, through the proper authorities, to the headquarters of the army or department in which the company is serving, or in which the rendezvous or depot may be situated; and he shall indicate in his report those of the applicants who have served longest at sea, and whether in the merchant or naval service. Not less than two years' sea service will constitute an ordinary seaman, and not less than four an able seaman; and, in the absence of other proof, the applicant may be required to make oath as to the service he has seen at sea. All recruits who may be found qualified for transfer to the navy will be retained at the depot until the decision of the army or department commander is made known.

Each Commanding General of an army or department which has been required to furnish a quota for transfer to the navy, will at once designate one or more officers, as may be required, to examine the applications, and determine from them, according to the qualifications of the applicants and the number to be furnished, what men shall be transferred to the navy, care being taken that the transfer enlistments shall be as apportioned among the companies of each command that no regiment shall be reduced below the minimum organization.

As fast as selections are made, the men selected for transfer will be sent to the designated stations in the most expeditious manner, under suitable conduct; and the officer in charge of each detachment will be furnished with complete descriptive lists, containing statements of the pay, bounty, and clothing received and due, which will be turned over with the men to the commandant of the station.

Upon being accepted at the naval station, the man will be dropped from the rolls of their companies as transferred to the Navy by enlistment; but if rejected for physical disability or for not having seen the prescribed sea service, they will be sent back to their companies; and if guilty of fraud or misrepresentation in their applications, the expense of transportation will be charged against their pay.

Weekly reports of the men transferred under the provisions of this order will be made to the Adjutant-General of the Army.

By order of the Secretary of War:

W. A. NICHOLS, Assistant-Adjutant-Gen.

DEPARTMENT OF THE GULF.

The Cane—The Plantations—How they are Worked—The Negroes.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

NEW-ORLEANS, Saturday, Feb. 13, 1864.

No one can question the propriety of first paying one's respects to the weather. We came out of the warm, soft weather of the Gulfinic a damp, chilly fog on the Mississippi, and as we reached New-Orleans this was intensified by a keen wind. So that while the thermometer stood high enough, our lungs and [cuticle were chilled to the marrow. Consequence of this was, that the whole company have suffered, and cold and consumptions abound. As to the healthfulness of this town for invalids, I should say "beware." Not that it is any worse than with us, but it probably is no better. The houses are cold, and fires uncommon. Coal has risen by some $20 per ton old master said, too. Certainly these thirty negroes are worthy of owning themselves, I thought. I found them, without any white man on the place, hauling the last of the crop to the railroad station, and carrying on affairs like white folks, if not better than some in these parts.

I asked them one or two questions.

"Cuzzey, Mr. Yankee, what great?"

No reply.

"I suppose none of you can read?"

They said, "none of us."

"Would you like to learn?"

"We would."

"Would you like to have your children learn?"

Sensation—as in the French Senate—followed by a decided assent.

"Would you be willing to pay something for a teacher, until Gen. BANKS' plan for schools is perfected?"

"We are ready; it would be the best way."

This did not seem quite stupid.

After a brief explanation of the new system of labor so carefully prepared by Gen. BANKS, my friend said:

"Are you ready to work upon this plan?"

"Yes."

"All who are willing to do regular and full work, hold up your hands."

About twelve were counted.

"All women who are willing to work regularly five days in the week, hold up your hands."

Twelve counted—the rest hung back, but at last about twelve of them came forward and assented; the balance agreed, for various reasons, to work less than full time.

"Now I wish you all to understand that if I take the place and hire you, that I shall do fairly by you and shall expect you to do fairly by me, or take the consequences."

"That yes, yes."

My friend will take the place, and try the experiment.

Western Emigration.

ST. LOUIS, Thursday, March 17.

Gen. POPE, from his headquarters at Milwaukee, published some information and suggestions for emigrants designing to cross the Plains this Spring, in which he says indications point to the concentration of the most powerful bands of Sioux Indians early in Spring in Missouri above the mouth of Grand River. A large force of cavalry, under Gen. SULLY, will march against these Indians as soon as there is grass enough on the prairies for the horses to subsist on. Until this expedition moves it will be unsafe for steamers to navigate the Missouri above Fort Pierre. Gen. SULLY's force will be strong enough to beat the Indians, if found concentrated on the river. If this concentration is not made, a heavy force of cavalry will scour the country on both sides of the river, drive the Indians into the interior, harass them during the Summer, and either force a battle or compel a peace. It is recommended that emigrants by water communicate with Gen. SULLY, the new Missouri, and not attempt to pass in advance of his forces, until notified by him that it is safe. As many students as possible are advised to go in company, with stock valuable parts bullet-proof. Emigrants traveling overland from a point above Fort Pierre are recommended not to start from the Missouri River in numbers less than 200 strong. A cavalry force will be sent from Minnesota as soon as possible to the mouth of Long Lake, and emigrants from that State can avail themselves of the protection of this force if they chose. Gen. POPE hopes by the middle of Summer to render travel across any portion of the Upper Plains as safe as it usually is; but he enjoins on the emigrants to move cautiously and in strong parties.

Mr. Chase and the Presidency.

The following is the letter to which Mr. CHASE refers in that which we have already published declining to permit his name to be used in connection with the Presidential nomination:

WASHINGTON, Jan. 18, 1864.

MY DEAR SIR; Your kind note is just received. As it has been so long on the way, I have telegraphed you that I will reply by mail.

At the instance of many who think that the public interests would be promoted by my election to the Chief Magistracy, a committee composed of prominent Senators and Representatives and citizens, has been organized here for taking measures to promote that object.

This committee, through a sub-committee, has conferred with me, and I have explained to them the conditions which seem to me to exist against any use of my name in that connection. They have taken the objections into consideration, and assure me that they think I ought not to refuse its use, and I have consented to their wishes; assuring them, however, that whenever any consideration by them or by the friends of our cause, thought entitled to weight, should indicate the expediency of any other course, no considerations of personal delicacy toward me should be allowed to prevent its being taken.

If I knew my own heart, I desire nothing so much as the suppression of this rebellion, and the restoration of Union, order and prosperity on sure and safe foundations. And I should describe myself, if I felt capable of allowing any personal objects to influence me to any action which would affect by one jot or title, injuriously, the accomplishment of that object. And it is a source of real gratification to believe that those who desire my nomination desire it on public grounds alone, and will not hesitate to act, in any matter which may concern me, upon such grounds, and such grounds only.

Of course, under these circumstances, I desire the support of Ohio. If, however, it shall be the pleasure of a majority of our friends in Ohio to indicate a preference for another, I shall accept their action with that cheerful acquiescence which is due from me to friends who have trusted and honored me beyond any claim or merit of mine.

Respectfully, your friend, S. P. CHASE.

Hon. JAMES C. HALL.

Election in Arkansas.

MR. LINCOLN'S PLAN.

From the Little Rock (Ark.) Unconditional Union.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18, 1864.

To William Fishback:

When I fixed a plan for an election in Arkansas I did it in ignorance that your convention was at the same work. Since I learned the latter fact I have been constantly trying to yield my plan to theirs. I have sent two letters to Gen. STEELE, and three or four dispatches to you and others, saying that he (Gen. STEELE) must be master, but that it will probably be best for him to keep the convention on its own plan. Some single mind must be master, else there will be no agreement on anything; and Gen. STEELE, commanding the military and being on the ground, is the best man to be that master. Even now citizens are telegraphing me to postpone the election to a later day than either affixed by the convention or me. This discord must be silenced. A. LINCOLN.

A SOLDIERS' LIBRARY.—A new attempt at improvement is being made in the Park Barracks—the establishment of a reading room and library for the soldiers quartered there. An association of ladies asks aid from our citizens for this purpose, which surely needs no recommendation to a humane heart. Their circular thus concludes: "New-York is behind other great cities in her provision for the aid and comfort of National soldiers while quartered within her limits, though her prosperity depends so largely on their exertions in the field. Philadelphia has won a most honorable name by her munificent arrangements for this object. It is certainly desirable that this City do likewise, and that it be generously remembered by thousands of veterans for years to come, for the hospitality, sympathy and care they received from its citizens. To this end contributions are solicited. They should be addressed to EDWARD DELANO, Treasurer, No. 11 East Twelfth street. Contributions of books, periodicals, old and new, illustrated periodicals, &c., are also earnestly called for, and may be sent to No. 65 East Twenty-first street.

THE PURCHASE OF THE FORT GANSEVOORT PROPERTY.

COMMUNICATION FROM THE COMPTROLLER.

At a meeting of the Board of Aldermen, held March 11, the following communication was received from the Comptroller, whereupon it was Ordered, That said communication be entered at length in the minutes and published in all the papers employed by the Corporation, and in the Sunday Times.

D. T. VALENTINE, Clerk.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, March 11, 1864.

To the Honorable the Board of Aldermen:

GENTLEMEN: In reply to the resolution of your Honorable Body, calling for information regarding the proceedings had for the purchase of the premises known as the Fort Gansevoort property, and the directions of the Common Council relative to such matter have not been complied with, I have the honor to [illegible]

REPORT:

That, on the adoption of the resolution authorizing the purchase of such premises, it was suggested that great doubt existed as to the party in whom the title thereto was vested. In order to exhibit to the Common Council the difficulty which I experienced in the matter, I took occasion to state to them the questions which presented themselves to my mind, and a communication setting forth the facts connected with the transaction, and to which I would again respectfully beg leave to refer. (Pro. Board of Aldermen, vol. 30, pp. 167, 168.)

A tender of deed having been made by Mr. Taylor, with demand of the consideration, in view of the facts stated by me in such communication, I did not feel justified in completing the purchase.

Mr. Taylor accordingly applied to the Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus, to compel me to accept the deed and to issue the bonds, as directed by the resolution.

The Supreme Court has sustained his application, both at Special and General Terms, a dissenting opinion, however, having been given at General Term.

On the decision of the appeal at General Term, I applied to the Attorney-General, as Counsel to the Corporation, my legal adviser, under the Charter, for his advice as to further proceedings. In view of the importance of the case, Mr. Develin requested authority, which was given him, to associate the Hon. Wm. M. Evarts as counsel in the consideration of the case.

I answer the opinions of the Counsel to the Corporation and Mr. Evarts, which were received by me on December thirty-one, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

Pending the consideration of these opinions by me, proceedings were taken by the Attorney-General, in the name of the people of the State of New-York, to test the title of the alleged owners of the property in question, and contemplating the application to the Supreme Court for an injunction to restrain the completion of the purchase.

In view of this suit, I concluded, with the approval of the Counsel to the Corporation, to refer the whole question to Hon. William F. Allen, late Judge of the Supreme Court, for his opinion and advice.

In my communication to Judge Allen, I gave a detailed statement of the proceedings taken by me in the matter, to which I refer your honorable body for further information in the premises.

The opinion of Judge Allen was received by me on February twenty, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four, and is annexed.

I have taken no action in the matter since the receipt of Judge Allen's opinion.

Respectfully submitted,

MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.

CITY OF NEW-YORK, LAW DEPARTMENT, OFFICE OF COUNSEL TO THE CORPORATION, December 30, 1863.

Hon. M. T. Brennan, Comptroller:

DEAR SIR: As the year is coming to an end, I propose to return to you certain matters on which you have desired my opinion, and which, owing to their gravity, I have retained for mature deliberation.

Of these the first and most important is the case of The People, ex rel. James B. Taylor, against yourself. In pursuance of my suggestion to you some time ago, which met with your concurrence, I submitted the case with all the papers of the various counsel engaged in the cause to Wm. M. Evarts, Esq. Inclosed I furnish you his opinions. You are aware that the Supreme Court at Special Term, and afterwards at General Term, adjudged it to be your duty to fulfill the directions of the resolution of the Common Council relative to the Purchase of the Fort Gansevoort property to Mr. Taylor. In his inclosed opinion, you will perceive, comes to the conclusion that the judgment of the Supreme Court would not be reversed on appeal. In a supplemental opinion he also declares that you would be personally liable for all costs which might be awarded on an appeal, inasmuch as you would be in the attitude of an officer of a Corporation refusing to obey its directions.

With my own views not differing from those expressed by Mr. Evarts on the whole subject, and in view of your personal responsibility in the premises, I am not prepared to advise an appeal from the deliberate judgment of the Supreme Court. Nevertheless, if you should think it your duty to proceed further in the matter, it will be necessary to provide two sureties who can each justify in double the amount involved, and if the matter takes this course I can only say that I will spare no labor or pains to obtain a reversal of this judgment, and to protect you from personal loss. Yours, truly,

JOHN E. DEVELIN, Counsel to the Corporation.

COPY OF MR. EVARTS' OPINION.

I have carefully examined the record in the case of The People, ex rel. &c., vs. Matthew T. Brennan, Comptroller, &c., submitted to me with the points of counsel for the relators and for the respondent, and the opinion of the Supreme Court, (at General Term,) and have given attentive consideration to the question submitted to me, viz.:

"Whether the prospect of a reversal of this judgment upon an appeal is such as to make such appeal suitable."

There would seem to be but two points to be determined for a right conclusion:

I. Is the contract for the purchase by the Corporation of the real estate from the relators valid in law, and capable of enforcement by judicial proceedings?

II. Is the proceeding by mandamus an appropriate proceeding for its enforcement?

If both of the questions be answered in the affirmative, no reversal of the judgment of the Supreme Court could be expected upon an appeal. If either of these questions be otherwise determined, an appeal would promise a reversal of the judgment.

I cannot doubt the competency of the Corporation to purchase these lands for the public use of a market, nor the completeness and validity of the contract set forth in the record to accomplish that object.

It is of course, material that, in taking the deed tendered by the vendor in performance on his part, the vendee should acquire a good title to the property, subject to no other incumbrances than those which the contract mentions.

Beyond this, I cannot perceive that any inquiry respecting the state of the title anterior to this completion of the contract of sale, by the delivery of a deed vesting title in the corporation, can be material to the rights of the parties.

In any view that can be taken of the objections raised to the title tendered by the vendor, I cannot perceive that they cast the least doubt upon the title which the corporation will acquire by the delivery of the deed tendered.

The only defects suggested relate to an adverse right to the property, legal or equitable, in the Corporation itself. The other statement of the objections shows the removal of every imaginable defect upon the delivery of the deed by the vendor, and its acceptance by the vendee.

A title in dispute between two claimants may certainly be considered as a good title to a purchaser, as one to the other, as well as where no such dispute exists. It follows, then, that the relators have a right to enforce this contract against the corporation by an appropriate action or proceeding.

If this be so, it is the duty of the ministerial officers of the Corporation to perform all acts necessary and proper to the fulfillment of the contract on its part. If the contract can be enforced by action, it is a violation of official duty on their part to withhold performance.

If, then, the judgment of the court has rightly settled the obligations of the Corporation to fulfill the contract, and the power of the relators to enforce it by judicial action, it is the duty of the ministerial officers of the Corporation to do all acts imposed on them as its agents, in performance of the contract. It cannot be doubted that the judgment of the Supreme Court has so determined, and, in my opinion, correctly. No reversal of this judgment on this principal point, can be expected from an appeal.

I have still to consider, however, the question whether, though the right of the relators is complete, the particular remedy of mandamus is open to them for enforcement.

Upon this point, also, I find no difficulty in supporting the judgment of the Supreme Court upon principle, and upon the authorities cited in the argument, and assumed in the opinion of the court. It seems impossible to contend that the relators, possessing this right, not resisted by the Corporation, need to enforce it by action against the Corporation, because the Corporation officers refuse to perform the duties which the law imposes on them as ministers. Undoubtedly the relators might resort to an action against the Corporation, and the latter be driven to mandamus against its own officers to protect itself and satisfy the claimants. I am of opinion that the law does not compel such circuity of proceeding, and that the judgment of the Supreme Court on this point cannot be expected to be reversed on appeal. WM. M. EVARTS.

NEW-YORK, Oct. 9, 1863.

COPY OF MR. EVARTS' FURTHER OPINION.

No. 2 HANOVER-STREET, Dec. 22, 1863.

MY DEAR SIR: I am in receipt of your favor of this date, in which you call my attention to the fact that, in the opinion which I have heretofore given upon the case submitted to me in the mandamus against the Comptroller in the matter of the Fort Gansevoort property, I have given no consideration to the question of the Comptroller's liability personally for the costs of further opposition to the judgment by appeal.

It is quite true that my former opinion was confined to the merits of the case, and this incidental point escaped my attention.

Of the direct liability of the defendant in the mandamus, though an official person, for costs when judgment goes against him, there can be no doubt. The result of the controversy determined that his conduct brought in question was not in accordance with official duty, and he must answer for it personally.

Whether, from this primary legal responsibility to the opposite party, he should be relieved by the body whose interests he had assumed to represent, would be wholly at his discretion, for he would have no legal recourse upon it. Especially would it be so in this case, where the competent corporate action in what has been opposed by the officer.

If, after judgment at Special and General Terms, the Comptroller should insist upon pursuing an appeal, which you should correct upon mature reflection to be unsuitable, if the decision should be adverse, for the costs.

I am yours, very truly,

WILLIAM M. EVARTS.

COPY OF LETTER TO HON. WM. F. ALLEN.

DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE, COMPTROLLER'S OFFICE, NEW-YORK, February 8, 1864.

Hon. William F. Allen:

DEAR SIR: I desire to obtain your written opinion on the questions presented by the pending litigation in the matter of The People, ex rel. James B. Taylor and others, against myself as Comptroller of the City of New-York.

This litigation involves the legality of the action of the Common Council providing for the purchase of the piece of ground known as the Gansevoort property.

The resolution of the Common Council for the purchase of the land in question was adopted about the time I came into office.

By the terms of the resolution, it was made the duty of the Comptroller to pay the consideration of the proposed purchase to the alleged owners.

On the 24 of February, 1863, I communicated to the Common Council, in connection with another subject, my refusal to comply with the direction of the resolution, to which I have referred in the following terms:

"It is gravely alleged that the title to this property is not in the parties from whom it is proposed to be purchased, and while I am not prepared to say the objection is valid, I am equally unprepared to decide that it should be disregarded, and the large amount of the proposed purchase money paid out without a judicial determination of the question.

I have consented to decline payment on the ground of objection to the sufficiency of the title, and leave the parties to their legal remedy.

If they have a good title, the question will be settled for the protection of the City, and if they have not, they are not entitled to the money demanded. It is proper for me to say that I do not consider the sum proposed to be paid greater than the present value of the property, or that the premises are not well adapted to a public purpose.

So far as I can learn the facts upon which the question of title arises, it would appear that in or about the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-two, the property then being owned by the Corporation, was struck off by Joseph B. Taylor then Comptroller, to Mr. Hembert Lovelay, of this City, as the highest bidder; he assigned his bid, or directed the deed to be made out to Mr. Simon Draper, who was then one of the officers of the Corporation, and incapacitated to purchase from the City; this qualification being discovered, Mr. Joseph B. Varnum was substituted for Mr. Draper, and the deed made to him. It is claimed that the intervention of Mr. Draper made the whole transaction invalid. It is also alleged that the bond and mortgage given for part of the purchase money was not executed in accordance with the terms of sale—the interest specified in the bond being six per cent, instead of seven per cent, as stipulated. I do not consider that to be a question affecting the title. The Comptroller should not have received any other than a proper bond and mortgage, and the City could have at any time compelled performance of the terms of sale in this respect.

The substantial ground of objection is that presented by the appearance of Mr. Draper in the transaction, and upon that ground I base my refusal to comply with the resolution of your Honorable Body, directing the purchase."

Legal proceedings were thereupon instituted on behalf of the alleged owners of the property, to compel, by mandamus, the performance of the duty imposed by the resolution. In this litigation, I was represented by Hon. John E. Develin, Counsel to the Corporation. The decision of the Special Term, where the question was first argued, was, that the Municipal Corporation possessed the power to purchase land for a market; that it was represented if its corporate capacity by the Common Council; that the action of the Common Council had been validly taken; that there was no legal objection to the validity of the title; that the Comptroller was a mere ministerial officer, and had no discretion in the premises, but to obey the corporate directions as indicated in the resolutions of the Common Council, and a peremptory mandamus was ordered accordingly to issue, commanding me to comply with the directions of the Common Council. From this decision an appeal was taken to the General Term, and after argument, the order of the Special Term, so far as the same directs the Comptroller to prepare, sign and deliver the bonds therein therein mentioned, in the manner and form therein directed, was affirmed, and I was directed to proceed to execute the writ of mandamus heretofore issued. On the rendition of this judgment, I addressed a communication to Mr. Develin, asking his legal advice as to the further proceedings in the matter, and his opinion as to the propriety of my appealing the case to the Court of Appeals. In view of the importance of the question, he requested authority, which was given, to employ associate counsel, and retained Hon. William M. Evarts as consulting counsel on the questions submitted. I have received the opinion of Mr. Evarts on these questions, and the concurring opinion of Mr. Develin. Mr. Evarts, in his opinion, states the two questions as follows:

1. Is the contract for the purchase by the Corporation of the real estate from the relators valid in law, and capable of enforcement by judicial proceedings? and

2. Is the proceeding by mandamus, an appropriate proceeding for its enforcement?

He answers both of these questions in the affirmative. On the first point he holds that the competency of the Corporation to purchase these lands for the public use of a market, and the completeness and validity of the contract set forth in the record to accomplish that object, he remarks: "The only defects suggested relate to an adverse right to the property, legal or equitable, in the Corporation itself." He holds that a title in dispute between two claimants may be considered a good title as between one and purchaser, as well as where no such dispute existed.

He also decides that a mandamus is an appropriate remedy by the alleged owners to enforce the contract by the ministerial officers of the Corporation. Mr. Evarts concludes that no reversal of the judgment of the Supreme Court can be expected. In a supplemental opinion, Mr. Evarts states that, if, after judgment at Special and General Terms, the Comptroller should insist upon pursuing an appeal, I think he should count upon being made personally responsible, if the decision should be adverse, for the costs."

Mr. Develin, in submitting the opinion of Mr. Evarts, states, "With my own views not differing from those expressed by Mr. Evarts on the whole subject, and in view of your personal responsibility in the premises, I am not prepared to advise an appeal from the deliberate judgment of the Supreme Court."

I have also been served with a notice, by the attorney of the claimants, of an intended motion for attachment against me for my failure to comply with the order of the Supreme Court, and am notified that I will be held personally responsible for such damages as the owners have already sustained or may sustain by my delay.

Since the receipt of this notice, the Attorney-General, on behalf of the people of the State, has taken proceedings to prevent the consummation of the proposed purchase.

Under all these circumstances, I feel embarrassed as to the course which I should adopt.

I have concluded to ask your careful and deliberate examination of the whole case, and your opinion as to the probable result of an appeal from the judgment of the Supreme Court to the Court of Appeals.

Your recent position as a Judge of the Supreme Court, and a member of the Court of Appeals, and your acknowledged standing as a jurist, suggest your fitness as my adviser in the peculiar circumstances of the case.

If I am advised by you that an appeal to the Court of Appeals will be attended with a reasonable expectation of success, I shall feel justified in taking an appeal, regardless of any question of personal responsibility.

Will you please call on the Counsel to the Corporation, and obtain from him the record of the legal proceedings had in the case.

I will feel obliged, if you will also consider in your opinion the bearing of the recent action of the Attorney-General, and the interest which the State has in the controversy, and would be gratified to have a personal interview with you on the subject. Yours truly,

MATTHEW T. BRENNAN, Comptroller.

COPY OPINION OF HON. WM. F. ALLEN.

SUPREME COURT.

The People, ex rel. James B. Taylor et al., vs. Matthew T. Brennan, Comptroller, &c.

I have examined, with care, the statement of the Comptroller, together with the printed case in this proceeding, instituted to compel the execution and delivery to the relators of the bonds of the City of New-York, in payment for lands sold to the City of New-York for the purpose of a market by the Common Council of the City.

The objections made to the contract of purchase, and its performance, are two-fold:

1. To the regularity and legality, as depending upon the regularity of the proceedings of the Common Council for the purchase, and

2. To the title of the relators to the lands sold and proposed to be conveyed to the city.

I understand that no question is raised as to the power of the Common Council to purchase lands upon credit for the purpose mentioned. It is within the express provision of that body, in the exercise of its governmental functions, to establish and maintain markets within the City, and its obligations and actions are not the subject of review or control by the Courts. It is a convenient and reasonable, if not a necessary, precedent power, in the right to purchase land, and pledge the credit of the City for the payment of the purchase price.

THE WILKES COURT-MARTIAL.

In the Wilkes Court-martial to-day, the cross-examination of Commodore RALPHIN was concluded. The testimony went to show that he often applied to Secretary to release the Vanderbilt and let him (RALPHIN) execute the orders of the Navy Department; that the accused replied that he acted according to his best judgment for the interests of the Government and of the service; that he (accused) must bear the responsibility, not the witness. A letter from the accused to the Navy Department, dated June 16, 1862, was read, stating he had received an order to send the Quaker to Admiral FARRAGUT; but she was then engaged on an important cruise, and in consequence of the Sonoma being ordered by the Navy Department to New-York for repairs; the United States ship Alabama having broken down; and the loss of the Shepherd Knapp, all belonging to his squadron, he was compelled to detain the Oneida until he could send another vessel to relieve her.

ARRIVAL OF RELEASED OFFICERS.

A number of officers, recently released from Richmond prisons, reached here to-day, and took up lodgings at different hotels, where they were objects of special attention. Among the number was Gen. DOW and Capt. SAWYER and FLYNN. Capt. SAWYER had an interview with the President during the day.

A REMARKABLE COUNTERFEIT.

One of the officers from Libby Prison presented Gen. SPINNER, United States Treasurer, with a five dollar note, manufactured by the officers, in imitation of greenbacks, so well executed that even SPINNER was at first deceived. It was done with a pen. Its manufacture was resorted to by officers to obtain the necessaries of life. One hundred and seventy dollars were exchanged for rebel currency, at the rate of fifteen hundred per cent.

ABOUT THE LIBBY PRISON.

The officers here from Richmond are fully satisfied that the Libby would have been blown up in case KILPATRICK's men had entered the city.

THE FRENCH OCCUPATION OF MEXICO.

The House Committee on Foreign Affairs, it is said, will shortly report a series of resolves in reference to the Mexican question, taking strong ground in favor of the Monroe doctrine. It has been the subject of discussion some time in committee.

THE BATTLE OF GETTYSBURGH.

Gen. HUMPHREY was again before the Committee on the Conduct of the War to-day. The committee are still collecting evidence in regard to the Gettysburgh battle. Gen. HANCOCK has been summoned to appear.

A BOARD OF INQUIRY.

The House Military Committee, to-day, amended the Senate bill providing for the appointment of a board of officers to inquire into the qualifications of Paymasters and Quartermasters, by adding that the said board shall be composed of volunteer officers.

THE NAVY-YARD SITE.

The House Naval Committee decided to-day to send a sub-committee, composed of Judge STANTON, Gen. MORRISON and Judge KELLEY, to Philadelphia, to make some additional inquiries respecting League Island, before definitive action was taken in selecting a site for a navy-yard. The committee left this evening.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

THE RECIPROCITY TREATY.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 18.

The House Committee on Commerce have agreed upon and ordered to be reported when that committee shall be called. A joint resolution authorizing and requiring the President to give notice to the Government of Great Britain that it is the intention of the Government of the United States to terminate the Reciprocity Treaty made with Great Britain for the British North American Provinces, at the end of twelve months from the expiration of ten years from the time the treaty went into operation, viz., Sept. 1854, to the end that the treaty may be abrogated as soon as it can be done under the provisions thereof, unless a new convention shall before that time be concluded between the two Governments, by which the provisions shall be abrogated or so modified as to be mutually satisfactory to both Governments. The President is also authorized to appoint three Commissioners, by and with the advice of the Senate, for the revision of the treaty, and to confer with other Commissioners duly authorized, therefor, whenever it shall appear to be the wish of the Government of Great Britain to negotiate a new treaty between the two Governments and the people of both countries, based upon true principles of reciprocity, and for the removal of existing difficulties.

CONFIRMATIONS.

The Senate in Executive session to-day confirmed several hundred promotions of officers of the regular army and navy, among them the following: In the Marine Corps—Capt. Shuterworth, to be Major; Lieut. Houston, to be Captain; Second Lieut. Robert O. Ford, to be First Lieutenant; and Edward C. Gatauson of New-York, Israel H. Washburn of Maine, Albert S. Young of Massachusetts, Frank D. Webster of New-Hampshire, and John W. Hoverstock of Pennsylvania, to be Second Lieutenants. Capt. Winfield S. Hancock was confirmed as Quartermaster, with rank of Major, vice Belger, removed.

The following were confirmed as additional paymasters: Benjamin L. Hewitt, N. L. Warnell, and R. J. Stevens, of Pennsylvania; W. D. Wheeler, of Massachusetts; Martin Evans, of New-York; Robert B. Howell, of New-Jersey; and as assistant quartermasters, with rank of Captain: A. J. McCunnington, and John Powers, of Pennsylvania; Josiah L. C. Ansell, of Massachusetts; C. M. Levy, of New-York; and William Stanton, of Ohio—the last two in the regular army. Charles Green was confirmed as Captain in the navy, and Asaph Hall, of Massachusetts, and Wm. Harkness to be professors of mathematics in the navy. John C. Gregg, and Paul Walsh, hospital chaplains. Maxwell B. Field, of New-York, was confirmed as additional secretary of the Treasury; R. C. Cunningham, S. F. Potter, of Wisconsin, direct tax commissioner for Florida; L. V. Provost, of Maryland, consul at Guayaquil; William W. Byers, deputy postmaster at Denver City, Colorado.

A GALLANT EXPLOIT WITH GUERRILLAS.

Col. TAYLOR, Chief of Staff of the Headquarters of the Department of Washington, to-day addressed a letter to Corporal TRAYNOR, of the First Michigan Cavalry, saying: "The Major-General commanding this department desires me to thank you for the gallant and soldierly conduct by which you liberated yourself and comrade whilst disarmed and in the hands of armed guerrillas. The same manly spirit and action shown by you, if manifested by your comrades, would rid the department of the predatory bands calling themselves 'Confederate soldiers.'"

This refers to an occurrence which took place on Wednesday. TRAYNOR and a companion were captured near Munson's Hill by four guerrillas, and taken into the woods. Watching their opportunity, they seized the guns of the two guards, shot both and escaped. One of the slain was a rebel Lieutenant.

THE SAN FRANCISCO LAND CASE.

The great case of NARBELLE and others against GRAY and others, will come up for argument before the Supreme Court on Monday, upon cross writs of error from California Circuit Court. The action is ejectment. The heirs of GRAY claim an immense amount of valuable land in the business part of San Francisco. Ten years ago the estate was appraised in the Probate Court there at over a quarter of a million dollars. The litigation in regard to it has continued ten years. P. H. GALPIN, of New-York, will argue the case for the heirs, and JAMES M. CARLISLE, of Washington, for the present owners.

THE TITLE TO ROCK ISLAND.

A report from Solicitor WEBB embodies the opinions of CALEB CUSHING, Judge MCLEAN, Mr. CRITTENDEN and Attorney-General BATES, to the effect that the title to Rock Island, Ill., remains vested in the United States, excepting 143 acres deeded by special act of Congress to DAVENPORT & SEARS, and 15 acres claimed by the Rock Island Railroad Company, which leaves 600 acres still under control of the War Department. The solicitor suggests that the entire island may be taken by right of eminent domain, or by act of Congress, with suitable appropriation for the satisfaction of private rights invaded, if necessary, for the location of an arsenal, and that civil and criminal jurisdiction may doubtless be obtained by an act of the Illinois Legislature in compensation for the location of their works.

THE RUMORED RAID.

Several days ago information was sent hither by one of the bridge guards on the Virginia side that a rebel raid was apprehended on our defences, and asking what he should do. He was promptly advised by the military authorities to obey former instructions. From the trifling incident exaggerated rumors prevail. If there is any excitement it is confined to a very small circle.

A CORRECTION.

The statement in some of the newspapers that Col. L. C. BAKER has authority to raise a brigade, is not correct. This denial is made by official request. No authority exists for him to raise troops.

POSTAL.

The amount appropriated in the law for the service of the Post-office Department for the year ending June, 1865, for inland service, is nearly eight millions of dollars; for foreign mail transportation, two hundred and fifty thousand, and for ship, steamboat and way letters, eight thousand.

PERSONAL.

Chief-Justice TANEY hopes soon to resume his duties on the Bench of the Supreme Court of the United States.

THE INDIANS.

A letter received at the Indian office from St. Louis says that Gen. SULLY, who is there, states that a large number of Sioux, two hundred and fifty lodges, have come into Fort St. Pierre to lay down their arms.

This amendment provides for the freedom of the wife and children of the slave recruit in the first section.

The second section authorizes the Commissioners in the Slave States, appointed under the act of Congress of 1862, to award to loyal owners of said wives and children a just compensation.

Mr. WILSON said it was becoming evident that negroes would not enlist unless they knew that protection would be afforded their families. He read letters to show that in Missouri the secession masters of slaves who had been mustered into our service were committing the most unheard of cruelties toward their families, selling them in most cases into slavery.

Mr. WILKINSON, of Minnesota, (Union,) moved to strike out the second section.

Mr. POMEROY, of Kansas, (Union,) thought it was a late day to say that nothing was due to the slave. The Chairman of the Committee on Indian Affairs brought in bills to settle up the Indians in their new condition. Here was a class who rendered the whites service all their lives long. Why should they not be settled in their new life. He proposed to amend the second section of Mr. WILSON's amendment providing that the Commissioners shall be authorized to settle the account between every such person made free and his or her loyal owners, and award to such party such just compensation as may be found due.

Mr. SUMNER, of Massachusetts, (Union,) said the main proposition was to strike down Slavery wherever we find it. It would take a long time to carry the constitutional proposition before Congress and the Legislatures of the country. Let us not postpone this matter under the delusion that it can only be done by a constitutional amendment.

Mr. WILSON also hoped the bill would not be postponed a day. We wanted soldiers at this time, and to get them is costing the country about nine hundred dollars. Here was a way to provide enlistments by saying to every loyal slave that his wife and child shall be free from the moment of his enlistment. With what grace could we ask men to enlist in our army when the moment their backs are turned from their homes their wives and children may be sold into the most abject slavery by their exasperated masters. This should be corrected by the passage of this bill at once. As to the matter of dollars and cents which had been urged as an objection, he had no idea that the average value of these slaves would be $300.

Mr. CONNESS, of California, (Union,) asked if they would not be worthless after a while. He did not approve of the idea of the Government rushing into the market to buy slaves when they were high. It was bad economy.

Mr. WILSON replied that while the Senator was waiting for the price to fall the man is waiting to have his wife and children protected, that he may enter the service of the country; and the country is going to ruin for the want of soldiers. The enlistments of colored men were decreasing on this very account.

Mr. WILKINSON did not want the Government to become the purchaser of slaves. We had already gone too far in the way of acknowledging property in slaves. We already paid three hundred dollars for slave recruits, and now we proposed to pay for his wife and children. Allowing these to be four in number, with the money we pay the recruit himself, they would cost the Government about nineteen hundred dollars. These persons owed service to the Government, and we had no more obligation to protect their families than to protect those of loyal white men who had entered the service. He was in favor of freeing the wives and children without compensation to masters. He believed the bill should be postponed, as it involved millions of dollars of outlay to no practical purpose.

Mr. LANE, of Kansas (Union), thought the bill should pass immediately, or we should stop enlisting colored men altogether. The proposition that we should take these men into the service without securing freedom to their wives and children, was absurd and inhuman. He would vote against giving their masters one cent of compensation.

Mr. BROWN, of Missouri, (Union,) did not think we should hesitate in the matter, while the wives and children of the brave men, who are sacrificing their lives for the country, are being sold into bondage. This was a scene too disgraceful to be tolerated for a moment. We cannot accomplish what we want by the proposed Constitutional amendments. Why then raise technical objections when these gross outrages are being perpetrated every day before our eyes.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, (Union,) said there was no question that this bill is defective and impracticable, as he had heretofore shown, because of the peculiar domestic relations of these people, and especially the relation of marriage. There were insuperable obstacles in the way of carrying out the provision, to free the wives and children of these slaves, as they were bound to each other in some cases by ties not recognized by us. Let us destroy the institution by such constitutional amendments as those proposed by Mr. HENDERSON, so that neither courts nor lawyers could find fault with our action. He wanted to do this work in an effective way, under a general system based upon constitutional amendments.

Mr. GRIMES, of Iowa, (Union,) thought that the marriage relation did legally exist among the colored slaves of the South. He confirmed the statements of Mr. WILSON, that the wives and children of slave recruits had been sold in Missouri and elsewhere, and he could produce a hundred letters to prove it. He hoped the bill would pass, and that we would not wait for the tardy passage of a constitutional enactment. There was no more important measure than this, and it was our imperative duty to pass it at once.

Mr. WILSON did not believe the value of these slaves would average one hundred dollars. If we passed the amendments to the Constitution, we will have to get three-fourths of the States in favor of it, if indeed it would pass the other House, and for thirty years he had not seen more devotion to the idol of slavery than in this session of the House. The only security we had for the accomplishment of the end was to take the occasion by the hand. He would be willing to free the wives and children of slave recruits and leave the question of compensation to the future.

[A message was received announcing the non-concurrence of the House in the Senate's amendments to the bill to provide for carrying the mails, and asking a committee of conference. The chair was authorized to appoint such a committee.]

Mr. CONNESS moved to recommit the Enlistment bill.

Mr. DOOLITTLE, of Wisconsin, (Union,) said there were 1,000 of these colored soldiers in Delaware, 5,000 in Maryland, 10,000 in Kentucky and 10,000 in Missouri, or 27,000 in these loyal States, and the passage of this bill would affect 81,000 persons. These, at the lowest figure, would cost $6,000,000. He believes that the proposed amendments to the Constitution would prevail, and that it would settle this whole question beyond change, beyond the legislative, executive and judicial departments of the Government, by the supreme verdict of the people. The amendments offered by Mr. HENDERSON, a Senator from a Slave State undergoing the regeneration which all these States are to undergo, supported in the committee and the Senate by the bold speeches of the Senator from Maryland and by the judgment of the country, would not be, in the language of Mr. SUMNER, an attempt, but a reality, and that reality should restore the life of the country. This bill affects loyal States at the very time they are perfecting measures of emancipation, and the very fact of holding out this promised compensation will cause those people to oppose the action of their convention. In the language of Mr. CONNESS, why purchase them now when their price is decreasing?

Mr. SLEMMER, of Virginia, (Dem.,) would wish to have the bill referred to the Judiciary Committee. He would call the attention of its friends to the extent of power involved in it. Granting the power to conscript colored men who were slaves, he asked, where do you get the power to take his wife and child from their master without the consent of the master? In reference to the question of marriage among Southern slaves, though there was not what might be called a proper marriage under the law, there would be no difficulty in the Southern States in ascertaining those who bore the relation of wives and children to slave recruits.

Mr. CLARK, of New-Hampshire, (Union,) said we might just as well discuss the question fully here, as he knew of no more important business before the Senate for action, and whatever might be the committee's action, it would be criticised on the floor. He certainly thought it more important than the repeal of the Fugitive Slave Bill, which the Senator from Massachusetts was so anxious to have passed, since no one wanted to render up a fugitive.

Mr. HOWARD, of Michigan, (Union,) hoped the bill would not be sent to the Judiciary Committee. There could be no doubt of the power of the Government to enlist persons known as slaves. This had been proved by our former acts. They were persons owing allegiance in the same sense as whites. If they had a right to employ them, they had a right to make the act effective; and if so, to remove any obstacles, even to the extent of freeing their wives and children.

Mr. FESSENDEN, of Maine, (Union,) was inclined at first, whether it was right to take persons of this description, but had become convinced that the Government had the right to use all reasonable power to secure its salvation. We decide not only upon the law, but upon the necessity which causes the law. He should vote for the amendment. As to the question of compensation, the Government could take property for public uses. The moral and Constitutional obligation is that they should pay for it, but not at the time. Therefore, we may take the property because there is no such thing as making the Government pay, as its obligation allows it its own time and mode of payment.

The further consideration of the bill was postponed.

The Senate went into Executive Session.

Adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

WASHINGTON, Friday, March 18.

THE HOMESTEAD LAW.

Mr. JULIAN, of Indiana, (Union,) introduced a substitute for the bill heretofore reported by him, from the Committee on Public Lands, extending the principles of the Homestead Law to persons in the naval and military service, on confiscated and forfeited lands. Mr. JULIAN argued that our public lands have practically ceased to be a source of revenue, and spoke of the beneficent and important national results of the homestead principle already initiated. This had been justly styled the slaveholders' rebellion. We have taken measures for the chastisement of traitors and the punishment of treason, by confiscation of their lands, under the rights of war. For traitors the Constitution has ceased to exist. They are enemies of the United States, and, as a consequence, public enemies. The rights of war and the rights of peace cannot exist at the same time, as to the rebels. The Constitution has nothing to do with them unless we choose to apply its principles to them as citizens. He repeated, the rebels are belligerents, and we should deal with them as a conquered people, simply under the laws of war, untrammeled by the Constitution. It was a war of subjugation. Our triumph is not near at hand, as some supposed. The rebels will resist to the death, and we must employ all our weapons to suppress them. We must take away the fee-simple of the lands from the rebels, and totally confiscate it; and he was advised that the President is prepared to aid them in such a measure. Should Congress and the Courts stand in the way, the wrath of the people will consume those who fail to execute the national will. We must fight with hard and heavy blows, and we will certainly win. Unless the forfeited and confiscated lands be disposed of as the bill provides, they will fall into the hands of speculators and become a frightful monopoly. The alternative is presented, and a prompt and a steady decision. The estates divided into farms would attract the settlement of loyal men. Slavery destroyed, root and branch, the soil would be tilled by freemen, bringing forth great individual and national wealth, and extending the blessings of civilization and Christianity. This measure was demanded by humanity and patriotism, to place the Republic on a basis of justice and equal rights.

No question was taken on the bill.

MINES AND MINERALS.

Mr. BEAMAN, delegate from Colorado, introduced a bill in relation to the mines and minerals in the public domain, which was referred to the Committee on Ways and Means. It recognizes the right of loyal citizens to mine upon the public domain; allows the local laws of the mining districts; restricts a person from holding more than one claim of each class of the different kinds of mines, viz., one placer and one water claim within each district; requires a permit from the United States Collector to work a claim, for which must be paid ——— dollars for the first year, and afterward an increased sum per annum; failure to pay, involving forfeiture of claim to the Government. In short, it licenses under the direction of the Treasury Department and the General Land Office, the working of the gold, silver and copper mines of the United States.

THE HOMESTEAD BILL OF 1862.

The House next passed to the consideration of the Senate bill to facilitate entries under the Homestead Bill of 1862.

Mr. HOLMAN, of Indiana, (Dem.,) offered an amendment, releasing any person in the military or naval service, who has served not less than three months from paying the required $10 entry fee. He could see no justice in the argument of his colleague (Mr. JULIAN) for giving lands to freedmen who had not raised their hands to suppress the rebellion, while white men who had made sacrifices and entered the service from patriotic motives were required to pay a stipulated fee. The restrictions should not be imposed upon soldiers.

Mr. JULIAN said the adoption of his colleague's amendment proposed a departure from the homestead policy which looked to the settlement and improvement of the land. He would not enter upon the discussion of the African topic with his colleague.

Messrs. HICKMAN, of California, (Union,) and DENISON, of Michigan, (Union,) also opposed Mr. HOLMAN's amendment, the former saying if the gentleman wanted to help the soldiers let him do so in some other bill.

Mr. HOLMAN's amendment was rejected by four majority and the bill passed.

It provides for facilitating entries by soldiers under the Homestead Law, enabling them to take the oath before a military officer instead of before land officers, &c.

PAYING FOR DOCUMENTS.

Mr. SMITH, of Kentucky, (Union,) from the Special Committee on the subject, made a favorable report on paying GALES & SEATON for certain volumes of Congressional annals and debates, claimed to be delivered before the resolution authorizing the supply was repealed.

During the debate, Mr. WILSON, of Minnesota, (Union,) said the amount involved was $35,000. He read from the testimony to show that while he did not charge that GALES & SEATON had anything to do in directing improper influences upon the House, there were lobby agents at work trying to force the resolution through, and that apparently $1,500 was floating as an incentive to action. The book-keeper of the National Intelligencer, however, testified that he had never made such a proposition to the lobbyites.

Mr. STANTON, of Ohio, (Union,) spoke about the value of the books, which contained the history of Congress from 1789 to 1845, and gave facts of the transaction.

JAMES C. ALLEN, of Illinois, (Dem.,) would not support the appropriation as an original proposition, but, considering all the circumstances, the money ought to be paid. The House in good faith ought to fulfill its part of the contract.

Further debate on the whole subject was tabled—67 against 56.

The House at 4¾ o'clock adjourned.

OUR WASHINGTON CORRESPONDENCE

Threatened Raids by the Enemy—Additional Particulars of the Dahlgren Party.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, March 17.

The news from the front to-day indicates that the two armies which have been quietly looking at each other across the Rapidan for several months are likely to collide at any moment. The Army of the Potomac is certainly not unprepared for such a result, and it is presumed that the rebel army under LEE is in as good condition as it is possible for it to be under the circumstances. The enemy, smarting under the damage done in the recent raids within their lines by the cavalry, have inaugurated something of the same kind, perhaps as a means of retaliation to keep up the spirits of their men and satisfy the demand of the people, who have a lingering hope that there is yet a chance for the Confederate cause. SEARS—known throughout all the South as the great defeated—crossed the Rappahannock, near Fredericksburgh, Wednesday night, with a force represented to be 5,000 cavalry; but this, doubtless, is an exaggeration, and 2,000 would probably be nearer the number. The object of this expedition of course cannot be at this time of writing fully known, but it is surmised that the enemy desire to serve MEADE as LEE has been treated, by severing his line of communication—in a word, to again destroy the Orange and Alexandria railroad. If this is the real object, I predict a disastrous failure. KILPATRICK and MERRITT are on the war-path—indeed, the whole army is ready for any emergency. There will doubtless be a demonstration made by the enemy on our right, and it is impossible to determine whether they intend to bring on a general engagement, make a scare, attempt to destroy the railroad, or whether, as some suppose, it is a movement to obtain supplies. The object will doubtless be developed within the next twenty-four hours.

As everything connected with the fate of Col. DAHLGREN is of deep interest, I have endeavored to ascertain all the circumstances attending his death, but with only partial success. I had an interview yesterday with Sergt. FLEEK, Company F, Fifth Michigan Cavalry, who was with Col. DAHLGREN when killed, and one of a party of five who succeeded in eluding the vigilance of the Bushwackers of King and Queen, and aided by friendly negroes, succeeded in reaching our lines in safety at Gloucester. He arrived at Alexandria yesterday, and now lies sick at the Mansion House Hospital. His story is substantially as follows: Tuesday night, March 1, after falling back from Richmond, Col. DAHLGREN set out to rejoin the main command; during the night the Colonel with about 125 men accidentally became seperated from the remainder of his column, and did not meet again. When the enemy shelled Gen. KILPATRICK's camp that night, near Meadow Bridge, the advance guard of DAHLGREN's command was near enough to hear the cheers of the enemy as they charged into our camp. The advance immediately fell back to the main column. The next morning early they crossed the Pamunkey, and in the afternoon crossed the Matapony without opposition. The first real hostile demonstration was made soon after crossing the latter river. These rivers were crossed in lighters. From 2 o'clock P. M. of Wednesday there was almost constant skirmishing, both at the front and rear, and between 11 and 12 o'clock at night, when near Stevensville, as the head of the column approached a thicket, a volley was fired by the enemy, by which Col. DAHLGREN and some others were killed. Maj. COXE ordered the command into the adjoining field, and formed it for defensive operations. During the night it was ascertained that they were entirely surrounded, and by a superior force of the enemy, whereupon Maj. COXE ordered the command to disperse, advising them to follow the course of the river and reach our lines at Gloucester. Sergt. FLEEK, with a party of twelve men, abandoning everything but side arms, moved off together; reaching the river bank they concluded that that would be a hazardous route to pursue, and accordingly went further inland. One after another of the party gave out, until finally the sergeant had with him only five men, viz.: Frederick Clark, Alexander Bell, August Land, Fifth Michigan, and a man belonging to the Second New-York Cavalry. Two nights they were guided through the woods by negroes, concealing themselves during the day. These negroes brought them food, and performed picket duty freely, without any offer of reward. Friday night they walked 45 miles, and early in the morning were made happy by the sight of a Union picket near Gloucester. These men speak in the highest terms of Col. DAHLGREN and Maj. COXE, and say that they were self-possessed all the time, and believe that they did all that any persons could have done under the circumstances.

The subsequent raid by Gen. KILPATRICK with a portion of his own command and a part of Gen. WINDER's, to King and Queen Court-house, was a complete success. Every building was destroyed at the Court-house; the people there boasted of killing DAHLGREN, cutting off his finger to obtain a ring, of possessing his sword, pistol and clothing. His cap was found in the hotel there. Is it to be wondered at that the men were wrought up to a very high state of excitement? The negroes gave information as to where bushwhackers resided, and their houses were also destroyed. The command came across a negro who had assisted five of our men to escape by giving up to them his boat—the only means he had of earning a livelihood—in which they passed down York River. The soldiers showed their gratitude to him for such noble conduct, by giving him a large supply of greenbacks.

The Accident on the Camden and Amboy Railroad.

It will be remembered that an accident happened on this road last week, and that on inquiry of reporters at the office of the Company, there was a degree of ignorance manifested in regard to it amounting to stupidity. Nothing appeared to be known—certainly nothing was communicated. A passenger, however, lays us who makes public that the accident occurred twixt Trenton and Princeton, while running at from thirty-five to forty miles an hour; the baggage car was wrecked, the first passenger car thrown off the track and nearly into the Raritan Canal, and the rear car plunged into a bank. Several of the passengers were injured, and the escape from fatalities was providential. The accident is attributed to the rotten ties, the drawing of the bolts from them, and consequent displacement of the rails. The ties, on examination by passengers, were found so rotten that the bolt of a boot sank into them, and one snapped off when jumped on. The iron, too, was weak and fractured. The examination revealed criminal neglect in the matter of inspection and care of the road.

ALLEGED WIFE-MURDER—THE HUSBAND ARRESTED.—A woman named BRIDGET BARRY, aged 45 years, residing with her husband in the basement of No. 20 Rose-street, died yesterday afternoon under circumstances which induced the belief that her death was the result of violence at the hands of her husband, MICHAEL BARRY. He was arrested yesterday morning for beating her, but at her request was soon after discharged. While she was able to converse, she informed a Fourth Precinct Policeman that her husband had recently beaten and kicked her very severely. The marks and bruises on her face, body and neck and arms clearly indicated that violence had been inflicted. She died suddenly in the afternoon, and her husband was accordingly committed, and is held in wrath a coroner's investigation, which will be held to-day. The husband says that the bruises upon her person were caused by a fall while she was in a state of intoxication. He is a man of low, intemperate habits, and keeps a groggery in the front part of his premises.

THE ELEVENTH INDIANA—DRESS PARADE.—Yesterday afternoon thousands gathered in the Park to witness the dress parade of the Eleventh Indiana, Col. DAN. MACAULEY. This regiment has been through most of the battles of the Southwest, and with honor. Its friends, as stated yesterday, claim it to be one of the best, if not the best, drilled regiment in the service. The dress parade and battalion exercise, yesterday, went far toward justifying the claim. The former was gone through with with military precision, and frequently elicited hearty cheers. It is doubtful if the bayonet exercise could be better gone through with, and the regiment retired to its quarters with encomiums showered upon it. They start for Indiana to-day, to recruit their depleted ranks.

METROPOLITAN FAIR BUILDINGS.—The different structures being erected for the use of the Metropolitan Fair, will be finished regardless of many well founded apprehensions, before the 25th inst. At the time it was decided by the Fair Committee on Organization to construct the Branch Fair Buildings, now nearly completed, on Union-square, it was thought they could not be put up in time for the Exhibition. However, the extraordinary enterprise displayed by the carpenters leaves no room for doubting that they will be completed at the time appointed. The main Fair buildings on Fourteenth-street are nearly ready for the arrangement of articles for exhibition. The Art Gallery, the Restaurant, and the main aisle, may be entirely ready for occupancy.

A MUNIFICENT DONATION.—The sum of $100,000 for the Metropolitan Fair has been received and acknowledged by the Committee of the Wholesale Dry Goods Merchants. Though this is very handsome, enough is understood that it will not be all, for contributions are still being received.

Rumored Change of Ministry—The Supposed Programme—Mazzini—The Rams in Parliament—The Case of the Sumter—Railroad Prosperous in the Southern Programme—War Preparations—England's Dilemma—The Rappahannock—French and English Ships and Guns—Denmark.

LONDON, Tuesday, March 1, 1864.

The week opened in Parliament last night with a series of skirmishes, a recognizance in force and an offer of battle. There is a rumor, which I give with all proper reserve, that the Conservatives will really make a push for the Government benches this session, at a risk of the dissolution of Parliament. The six months of the great Earl Russell have been overcome. Mr. D'ISRAELI is to be created a Peer, and become Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and Sir Hugh Cairns is to be Lord Chancellor, and take his seat upon the woolsack.

Several things point in this direction. Mr. D'ISRAELI directs his chief attention, this session, to foreign affairs, and his most telling attacks are upon Earl Russell. His anti-committal course, in these attacks, is also very marked, and it may be observed that he is not committed to any opinion or policy with regard to America or Europe. He attacks the diplomacy of Earl Russell with great force, and rents all his excuses on the humiliating position in which the Palmerston-Russell Governments have placed the country, but he gives no indication of his own policy, were he in a position to adopt one, except by allowing us to infer that he would avoid wars or consuls.

Lord PALMERSTON comes up plucky every time, and as in duty bound, defends his = nots friends in the other place, whom he cordially detests, and who have thwarted him at every turn. But he defends feebly. It is hard work to defend what one disapproves; and Lord PALMERSTON has no strength in store. The Times and Morning Post do their best to help him out, saying what he should have said, but the defence of Russell is up-hill work. He has "muddled and meddled," too much, and though the country is glad to be kept out of war, either in Europe or America, it is inactive under humiliation.

And now comes this very ugly affair of MAZZINI. Just when it is of the greatest importance to keep on good terms with the Emperor, here is Mr. SCARLETTI, Member of Parliament, and one of the Lords of the Admiralty, turns out to be the bosom friend of MAZZINI, while letters from the Italian conspirators are directed to his residence, No. 36 Thurloe-square, to Mr. FLOYZAN, indeed, but this gentleman is supposed to be M. PIONE, MAZZINI's Secretary. I said in my last, that the Government was in intimate relations with Italian refugees. This has been the case for a long time. Only the secret archives of the Department of State can tell what sums of secret service money have been expended upon Italian revolutionists. England has been up to her eyes in all the affairs of the Peninsula. Mr. SCARLETTI questioned in the House last night, denied all complicity with the plot to murder the Emperor, and declared also that MAZZINI was innocent. But the belief in his guilt is almost universal in Paris, as one may see by the vehemence of the correspondents of the London press. The Times, which a few weeks ago indorsed MAZZINI, has not a word to say. It prudently awaits the trial, which will take place in a few days. If MAZZINI is convicted, as seems certain, he will be demanded by the French Government. And then—well, then, he will take refuge in New-York perhaps. I am quite aware of the strong faith which many repose in the trustfulness of MAZZINI. I do not say that he is guilty; but it is evident that either the Emperor has conspired against MAZZINI, or MAZZINI against the Emperor. If it be said that the true object of the Italian patriot was to intercept the Emperor, and not assassinate him, I reply that upon the instruments, and would say, In the Orsini affair some forty persons were killed or wounded, and the Emperor and Empress had every narrow and wonderful escape.

The grand attack upon the Government is set down to come off after the Easter holidays. Lord R. CECIL gave notice last night that he would move a resolution of censure, based upon the detention of the rams in the Mersey. This will open the whole question of English policy toward the contending parties in America. After a careful survey of the whole ground, the Opposition feels itself strongest here. It takes the ground that the detention of the illegally and unconstitutionally of the detention; but if it is believed that it was right and necessary to detain them, and that, above all, America was prepared to enforce that right and necessity, the Government will be sustained in its action.

To make a little capital, and ward off their attacks, you will see that Lord LYONS, the British Minister at Washington, has been instructed to make some strong claims in the case of the Sumter. He will demand, we have dreamed, the trial for murder of the officer who shot Mr. GRAY, mate of the Saxon. He will demand compensation to the relatives of the deceased sailor, not upon the Japanese scale, perh under the orders of a [illegible] which the Liverpool magistrate wants [illegible] upon the matter.

Mr. Ewuen brings up the rumor of a hitch in the Mexican arrangements. It is said that the new Emperor is not minded to have his army commanded by a French General. He prefers to appoint his own Commander-in-Chief. It is possible that there may be some diplomatising, but it will be arranged. Matters have gone too far, I think, for a withdrawal on the part of the Imperial Hapsburg; and, if he refuse the crown, whatthen? It is still in the hands of Maximilian, who will not be obliged to look long for some but ready to wear it.

There is another item which may be of more importance. It is that orders have been sent to Cherbourg to man and prepare all the French iron-clads for active service. It was very strongly pressed upon the Government last night that something was going on of which Parliament had no information. They were [illegible] with papers but did not get at the truth. Now this truth, so much wanted, is probably something of this sort: England says to France, "pray help us settle this matter of Denmark." France replies—"You abandoned us in the matter of Poland, as you did in the expedition to Mexico. You encouraged the Danes, and then left them to invasion. We cannot join in diplomacy with a country which is not ready to back its diplomatic action by force, when necessary." England has to choose between a hearty and active alliance with France, in which France will lead, and downcast and isolation. France will not unite in conference or congress upon any other basis, but that of going forward, where force is needful. And the question now is whether Lord Palmerston's Government will enter upon a renewed French alliance, accept the congress, and join her forces with those of France, under the lead of the Emperor, or remain as she is, the laughing-stock of Europe. Never, perhaps, was a great and powerful nation placed in such a dilemma. Either way is humiliation. But the Emperor is master of the situation. It is not strange that there should be many an Englishman very sorry that the recent plot had not succeeded.

The Federal war steamer Kearsarge is cruising in the channel, waiting for the Rappahannock, which must be nearly ready at Calais. And how is it that that steamer, which was the other day a part of the British navy, and was converted into a Confederate man-of-war while crossing the channel, should be allowed to fit out at a French port? Would a French steamer, under similar circumstances, be allowed to hoist the Confederate flag and receive the hospitality of an English port? Would Mr. Adams have nothing to say, and Earl Russell nothing to do in the matter? But France, it appears, may do as she likes. The Florida has laid all Winter in the Government dock-yard of Brest, and a new does not bring peace yet in perfect order, requires put to sea. The Rappahannock will do the same. I see no account of so much as a remonstrance against the action of the French Government. Those of her claims, it may be impolite to make them; and this is a part of English humiliation in these days of sackcloth and ashes. France is powerful and can do as she likes. England turns her face, and everybody is helping her.

It was said among the bearings of Col. Sykes in the House of Commons last night, that England was unmistakably Prussia's ally. Colonel declares that the British Navy, at the moment, is more than a match for the combined navies of the world. It is to be hoped he knows what he says and speaks on different opinion. I believe the truth is, that the French Navy to-day is more than a match for the English. The new English ships are mostly old French models. A correspondent of the Times, who is well informed, asserts that the French could, if they would, make a Kearsarge, which, in a fighting model, says the difference between the English and French machines is this: The French are shorter and stiffer bottomed, and while the English Sixty-pounder balls would rattle of the sides of the French ships, the French guns would readily pierce the English. Rather an important difference! The Times does not put the matter much better. It says the great merit is, that progress is constantly making in mind and gear, and England is always spending immense sums of money on obsolete material. When any ship, or ship on one plan, has been completely superseded, everywhere else, the British Admiralty is just ready to go into it on the greatest scale, and a dozen Bay-of-Biscayes a large amount on last year's fashions only to find all her new dresses and bonnets useless, and to enter next season upon the costly experiment. The Times's hobby—this opinion—is perhaps a good one; but it also quite to build a navy built some like morning one is brought against her, it will be cold comfort.

Poor Belmontel! Driven into a corner, she fights with great heroism. King and Hignett, alike are shouting, "No surrender!" The Dance, as of old, with take to their ships and their islands that have to the last. The Russian rear-guard, in their late retreat, certainly did nobly, and lost one in four of its numbers. It taked good soldiers to celebrate a retreat against the assault of overwhelming forces.

There is a report that very important movements in European affairs are close at hand. We look for decisive news from America by the coming steamer.

PROCEEDINGS OF PARLIAMENT.

THE REBEL CRUISERS.

In the House of Commons on the 4th, Mr. G. J. Shaw Lefevre called attention to the course pursued by the agents of the Confederate States of America in fitting out vessels-of-war, and enlisting seamen in the ports of this country, in violation of the laws of neutrality, and moved an address for papers on the subject. The honorable member enumerated the vessels which had been built in this country for the Confederate Government, and said it was impossible to disguise the fact that they were built in accordance with an organized scheme on the part of the Confederate States, for fitting, manning, and sending out vessels of war, upon the commerce of the Federal States—among them were the Florida, Alabama, Georgia, Alexandra, the steamrams, and Pampero. He regretted that the Alabama had escaped detention, as the steamrams had been, when its real character first became known. Ever since she left the Mersey she had been engaged in destroying the Federal commerce. She had not followed the ordinary rules of warfare in sending in her prizes for condemnation. All the vessels now at sea under the control of the Confederate Government were built in this country. Eighteen months ago, when the Confederate Government had sent Colonel Gorgas to report on the condition of the British Navy, at the moment, it more was a match for the combined navies of the world. It was well known that some vessels and gunboats were in different stations. I believe the truth is, that the French Navy to-day is more than a match for the English. The new English ships are mostly old French models. A correspondent of the Times, who is well informed, asserted and it, too, at the risking of his finger, or let it go overboard, (the box and papers, I mean;) but, as the officer did not seem to take the box much again and gave it to the Captain. When we signaled the Vanderbilt, the Captain again told Mr. Harris, the second officer, to take the box from me again and be sure to put something into it to sink it; and, after the first boat which boarded us from the Vanderbilt was returning to the Vanderbilt, the Captain told Mr. Harris that if the boat from the Vanderbilt returned again to our ship then to throw the box overboard, which Mr. Harris did. I saw it go overboard myself. He then sent the steward, Thomas Webber, with another bundle of papers, to George Duffy, the fireman, to be put into the furnace, which was done; and, when the steward returned, the Captain gave him two papers to hide, and, in case the Captain was taken off the ship, then the steward was told to destroy them; and he made a motion with his fingers as if to tear them. This was in the pantry, and I was alongside of the steward at the time, and the Captain was opposite to both of us. I do not know whether the steward did destroy them or not." Campbell says, "The second mate gave me a sealed parcel, wrapped in brown paper, he told me to take care of it, and, if I was signaled by either himself or the Captain, I was to let them drop overboard; I was in the forward part of the ship; the boarding officer was at that time on board from the United States steamer Mississippi; after the officer left, I gave the parcel back to the second mate; afterward, when the prize crew came off from the Vanderbilt, I saw the second mate give the same parcel to the Captain of the Peterhoff, and I saw the Captain drop them overboard from the starboard gangway; the package was heavy; I do not know what was in it.

After the papers were thus destroyed and opened, Capt. Jarman made an affidavit concerning the matter, and an application of the claimant was further examined in reference to it. He then testified as follows: When the passengers engaged their passage, they were distinctly told that they would not be allowed to carry any letters, papers or dispatches in the ship. This was clearly understood. Before leaving Falmouth I received a telegram from J. Spence, Esq., the owner of the ship, instructing me to question the passengers as to whether they had any documents in their possession. I immediately called them together, and advised them as to my owner's instructions, and they, one and all, in the presence of each other and in the presence of Mr. Mohl, a passenger, and another passenger on board the ship at Falmouth, then declared that they had nothing in their possession of such description. The next day the first mate came to me and said he had found on his mind on his return to London, intending to go out to Mexico by the West India mail packet. This passenger's name was Bedie, or Beaby, and he left me the same day, and went on shore at Falmouth. After the ship left Falmouth, Mr. Mohl, the passenger above-named, came to me, and stated he had a small packet of white powder—patent white powder he called it—in which he and some of his friends were interested. I said, 'You had better deliver it to me.' He said it is a dangerous article to save on board.' He gave it to me, and I locked it up in my stateroom. Nothing more was thought of this until we approached St. Thomas, excepting that I asked of him why he had not mentioned this before leaving Falmouth. He replied, as it was neither pop-gun or cartridge of any kind, he did not think it important. When the United States steamship Alabama approached us, I called Mr. Mohl, and told him I did not like having this packet of powder on board, and that, if the ship was likely to be searched, it must either be opened or destroyed, and then gave it in charge of one of my officers—the second officer, Mr. Harris—with orders to destroy the package. If I instructed him, I told him in that case, to throw it overboard. Not being examined by the Alabama, it was not then destroyed. After leaving St. Thomas, we were boarded by a boat from the Vanderbilt. This boat left the ship, ordering me to remain until they returned. I then called on Mr. Mohl again, and requested him to let me see the contents of the package. To this he objected, saying it was a patent, and could not be seen by any one but himself and friends. So I ordered it to be thrown overboard, fearing it might jeopardize the ship in some way, and it was accordingly thrown overboard. I believe it to have been white powder as stated by Mr. Mohl, and had no reason to believe otherwise, and do not think any one knew the contents of this packet but the same Mr. Mohl. I do not now believe that it was anything but white powder as above stated. After the Vanderbilt's boat left the ship, I ordered Mr. Harris to throw the package overboard from the gangway. This was after the first boat at the Vanderbilt left us and before her boat came the second time, and after Mr. Mohl refused to let me see the contents."

The above is all the important testimony on this point. And on this the court says:

There are many things about this statement of Capt. Jarman, which are utterly incredible, and his whole statement is full of inconsistencies. He says that he had told all the passengers, before leaving Falmouth, that they would not be allowed to carry any documents, and that they all declared that they had none; that, after they left Falmouth, Mohl, a passenger, came to him and said that he had a small packet of patent white powder; that he, Capt. Jarman, said as Mohl had no fire-arms to deliver it up to him, for it was a dangerous article to have on board, and that Mohl then gave it to him, and he locked it up in his state-room. Why it was thought to be a dangerous article is not stated. If it were really thought by Capt. Jarman to have been a dangerous article to have on board, he certainly would have thrown it overboard immediately, instead of locking it up in his state-room. He then says, that nothing more was thought of it until they approached St. Thomas; that, when the Alabama approached them, he called Mohl, and told him that he did not like having the packet of powder on board, and that, if the ship was likely to be searched, it must either be opened or destroyed; that he then gave it in charge of Harris, the second officer, with orders to throw it overboard, if intimated by him; and that it was not then destroyed, because the vessel was not examined by the Alabama. He gives no reason for the obvious connection between the appearance of the Alabama, and his disinclination to have the package on board; or between a search of his vessel by the Alabama and his desire to throw overboard the package; or between the delivery of the package to him and his determination not to destroy the package. If it were dangerous to have the package on board for any other reason, except that it contained what could not be submitted to the inspection of the officers of the Alabama, it would have been dangerous to have it on board during the entire voyage to St. Thomas, and as well after the departure of the Alabama as before her approach. The whole transaction clearly shows that the only danger connected with the package was the danger of having it discovered by the officers of the United States steamship Alabama. It was positive danger only in this way. It was positive danger only that he was in having it so examined, unless it contained evidence of some unlawful transactions. Capt. Jarman then says, that after a boat from the Vanderbilt had boarded the Peterhoff, and had left her again, ordering her to remain stationary, he called Mr. Mohl, and requested him to let him see the contents of the package; that Mohl objected to this, saying that it was a patent, and could not be seen by any one but himself and friends. So he ordered it to be thrown overboard, fearing it might jeopardize the ship in some way, and it was accordingly thrown overboard. NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

Middle papers of the 9th of March say the Union forces attempted to land on Dauphin Island, thinking it unoccupied, but happening to catch sight of the Confederate soldiers, concealed and waiting to receive them, they hastily retired, afterward furiously shelling the woods. They also say the Union picket-boats reconnoitre with impunity to the foot of Fort Gaines' wharf.

Indiana, on the 1st day of February last, had furnished her quota under all calls, and had an excess of 7,330 men, not including reenlisted veterans. To this excess is to be added the number of men mustered into the old and new regiments since the 1st of February, and the number supposed to be enlisted not mustered in, and a number of reenlisted veterans, in all estimated at 17,000 men, making the total excess about 24,000 men.

Brig.-Gen. Gooch, of Massachusetts, who went out as Colonel of the Second Regiment, is now being tried by court-martial on charges preferred against him by Quartermaster Bingham of Gen. Gillmore's Staff. Among the charges is one of ordering a commissioned officer to be confined, unnecessarily, in a guard-house for three days.

The reported raid of the rebel Gen. Stuart across the Rappahannock, is not confirmed by last night's dispatches.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the bill to facilitate the carrying of the foreign mails was called up and passed. The bill promoting enlistments came up in order, and occupied the attention of the Senate through the greater part of the session. A long discussion took place on the section which gives to loyal owners of slaves compensation for the wives and children who are freed by virtue of the enlistment of their husbands and fathers. Action on the bill was not concluded, and the Senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House, Mr. Julian, of Indiana, introduced a substitute for the bill heretofore reported by him from the Committee on Public Lands, extending the principles of the Homestead Law to persons in the naval and military service on confiscated and forfeited lands. Mr. Bennett, from Colorado, introduced a bill concerning mines and minerals in the public domain, recognizing the rights of loyal citizens to locate and work claims, on condition of paying a stipulated yearly rental to the Government. The proposition to pay Gales & Seaton for certain public documents was lost. The House adjourned until to-day, which will be devoted to speech-making.

LEGISLATURE.

In the State Senate, yesterday, the bill to establish a public market in New-York was reported adversely, and the report laid on the table. The bill to amend the charter of the Hudson and Harlem Canal Company was reported favorably. The bill extending the provisions of the General Bounty Act indebtedness created for the procurement of Volunteers, was ordered to a third reading.

In the Assembly, the concurrent resolution was passed, authorizing the Chief of the Bureau of Military Statistics to place the flags and trophies of the war in the New-York Sanitary Fair. The Westchester County Bounty Bill and the Canal Appropriation Bill were passed. Among the bills reported were: To regulate ferries between New-York and Staten Island; authorizing John T. Mills to use cars on the Bull's Head stage route; against a railroad on the Bloomingdale Road; authorizing the Erie Railway to increase its capital stock, and the Cross-town Railway Bill, with amendments.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Supervisors held a special meeting yesterday, when the Volunteer Committee submitted a full report of their operations in filling the County quota under the call for 300,000 men, which was received, and five hundred copies ordered to be printed. A new Bounty Fund Ordinance was then adopted (and forthwith approved by the Mayor) appropriating $2,000,000 and the unexpended balances (about $400,000) of the Substitute and Relief and Bounty Fund loans, and reappointing the committee for the purpose of continuing recruiting and the payment of the County bounty of $300 to fill our quota of 6,400, required by the new call for 200,000 men. The bonds to be issued for the $2,000,000 loan will bear six per cent. interest and be payable in sums of $500,000 on the first days of November in 1867, 1868, 1869 and 1890. Mr. Davis read and submitted a communication in defence of his action as a Commissioner of Harlem Bridge, as assailed in a recent committee report to the Board of Supervisors of Westchester County. Mr. Davis thinks the report reflects upon him by mixing up the doings of the former with the present Bridge Commission—the extravagant contracts of the former being imposed by judicial decision upon the latter. The board concluded to take cognizance of the whole subject, and appointed Messrs. Blunt, Purdy, Stewart and Coffin a special committee to investigate the charges of the Westchester committee. Adjourned to 2 o'clock P. M. on Monday.

The Rochester Union states that the Board of Directors of the Western Union Telegraph, at a meeting in that city on Wednesday, voted to accept a proposition made by P. McDonough, Cortlandt-st. enough to that company his valuable telegraphic grants from the Russian and British Governments. This action of the Western Union Board secures an uninterrupted telegraph line from New-York City to the mouth of the Amoor River in Asiatic Russia. Mr. Collins will give the company the benefit of his invaluable services in the prosecution of this truly magnificent enterprise. And the line will be pushed forward as soon as all necessary preliminary arrangements can be completed and with all possible vigor.

Flour opened yesterday rather briskly, but closed heavily. Wheat and corn were very quiet. Oats were more active. Provisions were in moderate demand; pork was cheaper. Groceries were in request, as were also candles, fruit, hay, hides, leather, salt and tobacco. Cotton was inactive and declining. Spices, metals, tallow and whisky were in good demand. Freights were more active. Jobbers report increased animation in dry goods, but at less buoyant prices, especially for domestic cottons, in view of the rapid decline in the market value of the raw material. The violent fluctuations in gold have also had a depressing effect.

There was increased excitement in the Stock market and prices generally higher than on Friday, including the Government Stocks. Gold left off 162@162¼ ₩ cent. Money easy.

An Earnest Word of Warning.

There is an impression abroad among the people, which we have already commented upon, that, as greenbacks are so plenty, and every one is feeling so prosperous, it is perfectly right and proper for every one to spend as freely as he likes. There is no sort of conscientious feeling in regard to the duty of economy. The expenditures for luxuries are unexampled, even in the history of our wasteful people. Every one, except those dependent on regular salaries, is extravagant to the last degree. The jewelers, and the dealers in expensive goods, assure us that there never was such a demand for the most costly wares. Diamonds, pearls, watches and ornaments, bronzes and carpets, silks and satins, expensive furniture and paintings, wines and costly dinner-ware, are continually sold, and are ornamenting our wealthy houses. Then, in the classes of more moderate means, similar habits on a smaller scale everywhere prevail. The wives and daughters of shop-keepers and upper mechanics, of teachers and preachers, of country lawyers and doctors, still buy their silks, and carpets, and pianos, as if they were as well off as they ever were.

The nation does not seem to recognize that it is in war, or that its habits of economy have anything to do with its ability to pay the public debt. Some one else seems to be spending for the war, while we spend for foreign luxuries. "Money is plenty, and why should not we have the benefit of it?" "The Government may be in debt, and we have plenty of means." Such is the universal thought on this matter, if not the expression of it, and it is full time that the press and the pulpit should expose its fallacy, and teach some of the first principles of political economy.

It must be remembered that we are all in debt for the expenditures of this war—every individual man, woman and child of the whole community. It is not the Government which is paying, but we, the people. For every dollar—or, in other words, for every day's labor—diverted to this war, and, in great part, wasted, in an economical point of view, we must each of us pay in full, or at least pay its interest, if we lay it on the future. We cannot escape this. All the Treasurers in the world cannot make money. If Mr. Chase possessed all the financial genius ever granted to man, he could not create means for the nation to pay its debts with, any farther than he creates labor. He may indeed borrow from the labor of posterity, but he must pay interest from the labor of to-day. In so far as the money he sends forth exceeds the labor it is designed to represent, it loses in value and purchases less of commodities. It is just as impossible for the nation to expend its income for war, and at the same time to buy foreign luxuries, as it would be for an individual. We have each of us and collectively, only just so much which we can spend; if we go beyond, we fall in debt and may eventually be bankrupt. It is clearly possible for this nation to spend so much on this war, that neither the labor of the present nor the mortgaged labor of the future could repay it. National bankruptcy is an event—improbable as it may be—which is within the limit of things that can happen. If it should come, no words could paint the disgrace and the calamity which would overtake our country.

But there is not the smallest reason to fear or to anticipate this, provided the people will only apply their conscience and their common sense to the whole question. This nation could bear a debt of five thousand millions of dollars, and eventually, with our enormous production, sweep it off, provided we acted under it, as we should if it were an individual debt—that is, if we economized to the utmost degree.

What we pay for foreign luxuries diminishes the capital of the country and our ability to meet our public obligations. Our imports of luxuries are so much lost to us; they also tend to raise the price of gold, and, of course, in so far to add to the total expenses of both Government and people. It is the plain and manifest duty at this time of every man and woman to bring down their expenditures. It is an obligation we owe to the country not to buy foreign silks and satins, and jewelry and wines, or costly furniture from abroad. Every person should feel that for himself he is bound to save all that is possible. Old clothes should be worn, old furniture used, luxuries be dispensed with, to meet this terrible crisis. We have no right to buy useless indulgences while we are laying up a great debt for the future. It is not honorable; it is not patriotic, nor even prudent. No people can be spending a thousand millions on a gigantic war, and at the same be holding a carnival of extravagance and gluttony. Somebody must pay for it all. Our apparent superfluity of money should either be invested in permanent investments, or should go to cure the sad ills of war. Our great success, financially, in the beginning of this struggle, resulted from the universal economy of the people. We saved enough then to pay the current expenses of the war. This has all passed by. Every one now is spending money for every possible vanity. Careful financiers estimate that $500,000,000 per annum can be saved by retrenchment.

Unless the people shall see the folly and wrong of this extravagance; unless Congress shall still further check the national wastefulness by severe and heavy taxation, we drift inevitably toward a dreadful abyss. Let us be warned in time.

The McClellan Meeting.

If there be a serious intention to make Gen. McClellan a Presidential candidate, his intelligent friends, if he has such, are bound to see that he is put forward in a manner becoming the dignity of the position. They had no right to leave their first mass meeting summoned in his behalf, in this great centre of political influence, to the management of such an unknown and characterless set as, with the single exception of the resurrected Amos Kendall, figured at Cooper Institute. That locality has been in times past the seat of a great many political demonstrations, but never of one so utterly without force. With the single exception we have noted, not a person took part in it who was ever before heard of; and even that exception was heard of so long ago that the memory has to struggle to recall him. If there are men of position, of weight, of influence, in this City, who intend to give Gen. McClellan an earnest support, why do they not show themselves as he first comes into the political field? Why this holding back at the very start of the campaign, when so much depends upon the front displayed? All of Gen. McClellan's military history shows him to be reluctant to move the first inch without an array so magnificent that its very sight shall strike consternation; yet in this political enterprise, so difficult as to be almost desperate, he is made to set out with this shabby parcel of nobodies. It is not just. It is not decent. If Gen. McClellan were not the patriot he is, he would exclaim indignantly, "I'll not march through Coventry with them—that's flat."

Yet, there is a reason, and a very strong one, too, why Gen. McClellan is not better supported, in this initial stage of the campaign, by the influential men of his party. Though he has a certain personal prestige which it is thought can be put to practical use, there is yet no manner of agreement among the different sections of the Anti-Administration party, to what particular use it shall be put. The party is in a completely unsettled state. Nobody can yet say whether it will or will not take open ground for peace. Some of the most powerful spirits of the party are doing their utmost to force it to adopt an unequivocal peace policy. They insist that there is no tenable position between that, and a positive support of the war in the shape it has actually and unalterably received. They claim that the sword not only has failed thus far, but that for all time it must fail, and that negotiation must be tried. They are for meeting the Administration on the main issue, and not any of those minor points concerning which even the supporters of the Administration may honestly differ. It is to be determined, between this and the meeting of the party convention in July, whether the party can be brought to that ground; but at present, as the votes in Congress constantly testify, there is a great want of harmony on this vital matter. McClellan himself is committed to no distinct policy. It is avowed by many that he would favor the continuance of the war. It is indeed very noticeable that his name is not a favorite one among the more advanced and decided peace organs. Still he cannot be said to be identified with any distinct portion of the party. He is the exponent of nothing definite. The adventurers who took him in hand the other evening did not even attempt to define his position as regards the issue of war or peace. Their resolutions and their speeches were alike made up of unmeaning generalities. A good deal of fustian was expended upon the marvelous military merits of McClellan, but not a single attempt was made to prove him, in a political sense, a representative man of the party. The party, in its present anomalous condition, is not capable of being represented.

The Cincinnati Enquirer, the foremost Opposition paper in the West, affirms: "The Democratic—at least in these Western States—is a peace party. It ought to be so everywhere; and its members are settling down upon its organic principles thus to become." This is true. The party is now but in a transitional and anomalous state. Its leaders are all conscious of this, and therefore refuse to lend themselves, for the present, to any attempt to commit the party to a particular candidate. It must first be determined what the party is, before it can be settled who will be its fittest candidate. We do not at all wonder at the reluctance of the Opposition leaders to commit themselves yet to the support of McClellan. But, in the likelihood that they will have a future use for him, they ought to save him in the meantime from being started on his political campaign in an unseemly style. If made a candidate, he will have a sufficiently hard road to travel at the best.

Happy Accord.—There seems to have been a very happy accord in a number of instances of late between our own Government and that of Great Britain. The British Government, a few weeks ago, sent instructions to Lord Lyons to ask immediate explanation and redress for the violation of British neutrality by the American gunboat Ellis & Annie pursuing the Chesapeake pirates into the harbor of Halifax; but we have the word of Mr. Layard, in the House of Commons, for saying that long before this demand had reached the United States, an ample and satisfactory apology for the violation in question had been offered by the American Secretary of State.

In addition to the above, we now learn from England that the British Government has just sent out a demand for the restoration of the bark Saxon, captured by the Vanderbilt off the coast of Africa; but our legal columns yesterday gave evidence that Judge Betts, of the United States District Court, issued a decree on Thursday last restoring the Saxon to her owners.

We could wish that our just demands from time to time upon the British Government were thus promptly, or rather in advance, accorded.

The Peterhoff Case.

We had noticed with some surprise, that throughout the recent debates in the English Parliament upon our Prize Courts, the speakers, in all their complaints of illegality, had not a word to say of the case of the steamer Peterhoff. We were surprised at this, because we could not but remember the indignation which was loudly expressed in England when the Peterhoff was captured. The capture was declared to be "a discreditable proceeding," an "illegal capture," a "deliberate attempt to magnify and extend the powers of blockade," "a proceeding which called for the serious attention of the country." Earl Russell was specially appealed to "to take measures to prevent its repetition." The Shipping Gazette proposed that the English cruisers on the West India station be directed to convoy vessels, whose papers, like the Peterhoff's, were fair on their face; and the London Times declared that even if the Peterhoff should be condemned by our Prize Courts, the British Government could not acquiesce in such a condemnation.

But the case went on in the usual way, and the vessel was condemned, and now, when the opposition to Her Majesty's Government find fault with its action, they have a great deal to say about the case of the Springbok and the Science, &c., &c., but the name of the Peterhoff is not even mentioned. Not only does the British Government appear to acquiesce in that condemnation, but even those who are most zealous to find fault with its acquiescence in other cases, seem by their silence to agree with it in this case.

An examination of the opinion of our court in the case, which has been recently printed, seems to furnish the ready explanation of this; and we have thought that our readers would be interested to read a pretty full abstract of the opinion, which they will accordingly find elsewhere in this paper. It will satisfy them, we think, that the capture of the vessel was not only not illegal, but entirely justifiable, and her condemnation entirely warranted.

Every one knows and knew at the time, that the cargo of this vessel, if it really was intended to be taken to Matamoras, was to go there for sale direct to the rebels, and that the best face that could be put on the matter was, that it was an attempt to steer just as close as possible, with safety, to a breach of the law. An enterprize of this character does not commend itself very warmly to our sympathies, and when we find that one of the claimants of the cargo, a former resident of Texas, while asserting that he was a loyal citizen of the United States, who had been driven out of Texas for his opposition to secession, was yet ready and willing to enter into a scheme for supplying Secessionists with articles which they needed, we cannot feel sorry for him when we see that the court holds that he is still a citizen of Texas, and that all the cargo which he claimed must be condemned as enemy's property, and that the fact of this property being on board, was ample justification for the capture of the vessel.

The court holds that the destination of the cargo was Texas. We have no doubt that it would have found its way thither, but we must say that the case, to our mind, presents itself on this point rather as a case of strong suspicion than of positive proof. That there were large quantities of articles contraband of war, and that all the claimants of vessel and cargo had shipped such, is beyond a question, and as the court holds their destination to have been the rebels' country, the condemnation of the cargo follows inevitably upon this ground. And, furthermore, the destruction of a bundle of dispatches by the Captain of the vessel, just as she was seized by the Vanderbilt; his silence about it when first examined, and his extraordinary stories about it when he found that other witnesses had told of it, furnish abundant justification, in accordance with English precedents, for the forfeiture of the vessel.

The whole story of the Captain about Mr. Mom and his "white powder" is absurd enough—full as absurd as that story of Lamar's about his new fangled powder made out of plaster and water, with which he was going to astonish us and "witch the world."

We think our readers will find the decision to be interesting, and that when they have read it, they will not wonder that Fitzgerald and Bentinck and the rest of them, did not see fit to waste the time of the House of Commons by enlarging upon the facts of this case, or urging the Government not to "acquiesce" in the decision, but to demand reparation for "such a judicial outrage."

Judge Lynch.—Our fellow-citizens in the very far West, in the mineral territories bordering upon the Rocky Mountains, and in those on the other side of the mountains, are holding Lynch courts in extraordinary number, and carrying out the decrees of that ferocious judge with unprecedented energy. Our latest files from the distant regions of Idaho, Nevada, Utah, etc., contain accounts of executions in numbers that we think were never equaled even in the early days of California settlement, nor in any part of the West.

A letter from East Bannock City, Idaho Territory, contains an account of a large band of robbers and murderers in that part of the country, who plundered and killed travelers on the route to the mines. About the beginning of the year the citizens took the matter in hand, somewhat after the fashion of a vigilance committee, caught a lot of the scoundrels, and, says the account in the Union Vedette of Feb. 5:

"The result of the uprising of the patient and long-suffering people has been the summary hanging of about twenty of the robbers and murderers, and the people don't show any signs of letting up. It is probable, from present appearances, that twenty or thirty more will be hung. There is no doubt in the minds of the people of the guilt of the parties hung, evidence having come to light of the most positive character in reference to sundry murders and robberies."

Of these, four were executed in Bannock City, three on one pole, and at Virginia City, five on one beam at the same time; and the Sheriff of the former place was hung upon a gallows which he himself had built. Beside those who were executed, a judge and a lawyer, who had acted as counselors to the band, were banished. Both those who were hung and those who were banished seem to have taken the matter in good part—some of the former hurrahing hilariously, and Judge Truman, when the verdict of banishment was read to him, struck a melo-dramatic attitude, and, in the words of Cavaliers, exclaimed: "Banished from Rome! What is banished, but set free from daily contact with the things I loathe?" etc.

The accounts assure us that it is not to be understood that all this terrible work was done by an excited or unruly mob, but that a more sober, quiet and determined assemblage of citizens, with the law in their own hands, was never seen.

From the Monterey Gazette, of the 11th ult., we also learn that two men living on the Natividad Ranche, "who had no visible means of subsistence, yet dress well," were suspected of murder, arrested, and, the crime being fastened upon one of these gents, "the people," says the writer of the account, "forcibly took charge of the prisoners, tried them by jury, found Lopez guilty of murder, and, I suppose, hanged him, as his body was brought in and buried yesterday."

In the Territory of Nevada, as we learn from the Aurora Times, Judge Lynch has had quite an active time this year. In the beginning of last month, four men were taken in hand by the "Citizens' Association," tried, found guilty of murder, (one of them was accused of having killed thirteen men,) and all of the four were condemned by the people to the gallows. On the 9th of February, at mid-day, they were taken from the Aurora jail, under a strong guard of citizens, conveyed to the scaffold, and executed. "The masses," says the Times, "seemed resolved and fully determined on seeing the decision of the Citizens' Association carried out quietly but surely."

A bill was introduced into Congress on Thursday of this week, providing for the division of the territory of Idaho into two territories, so that the administration of justice might be secured. We think it had better pass. On the same day bills were passed enabling Nevada and two other territories to form constitutions preparatory to their admission to the Union as States; and, as a condition, an irrevocable ordinance was provided prohibiting Slavery—we think lynching might have been added.

The Granting of Franchises to Corporations.

There is a measure before the British House of Commons, just now, for the creation of a tribunal to hear and pass upon all applications for franchises, such as railroads which affect private or corporate rights, instead of leaving them, as now, to be disposed of by "private bills," after a hearing before a committee. The reasons which call for the change there are the exceedingly unsatisfactory nature of the inquiries into the pros and cons of such applications, which are all that can be made by a parliamentary committee. The members are often not used to such investigations; the rules of evidence are not strictly adhered to in the examination of witnesses, and the sense of responsibility felt by each member of a body which changes every session, is of course very slight. The amount of jobbing which attends the passage of all railroad bills is, therefore, as might be expected, very great. If, however, applicants had to make out their cases before a court, composed as courts of justice are, and guided by the same rules, and acting under the same sense of responsibility, it is believed their public would be vastly better protected against injury than they now are, while to the applicants themselves the delay and expense would be greatly diminished.

We certainly need something of the same kind here. The contempt of the Legislature for local and individual rights, as shown in the reckless manner in which it grants charters to railroad companies in this City, is yearly increasing. It is now all but impossible to procure the insertion in the charters of railroad companies of a single condition calculated either to benefit the public, or to protect them from fraud. Neither petitions nor remonstrances produce the slightest effect, and the speeches delivered before the committees by the lawyers, however much they may influence the report of the committee itself, have about as much effect upon the shape in which the bill finally passes as the beating of a tom-tom upon a lunar eclipse. The reason of this is that the Legislature is so large a body that however corrupt its action may be, no individual member feels in the least ashamed of it, particularly as he is not called upon to give his reasons for his vote. The responsibility, in short, is divided among so many, that nobody in particular is troubled by it. The natural consequence is that there has been nothing more scandalous in the history of legislation than the way in which valuable franchises are now bestowed upon jobbers and speculators. Private rights and public convenience are both treated with utter contempt. If, however, there were a permanent committee appointed, of but three or four members, of whom some might be laymen and some lawyers, to whom all applications for grants of franchises should be made, and by whom property-holders and others interested should be heard, and who should be compelled to give in full the reasons for their decisions, as judges in the courts of justice are, we should have the strongest guarantees which it is possible to create both against corruption and carelessness. Men who will have little or no hesitation in being one of a hundred to commit a fraud, will shrink from being one of three or four; and the basest of men is chary about committing acts of baseness if he had to tell the world at full length his exact reasons for committing it.

One thing is certain, that some means or other must be devised ere long of checking the present recklessness of legislators playing into the hands of speculators. The indifference which they have shown in the City railroad grants to the public comfort, in spite of protest and remonstrance, is a curious commentary upon the theoretical control of democracies over their representatives, and there is something barbaric in the indifference to decency which is shown in the resolute refusal to enforce any rule to prevent overcrowding in the cars.

Note from Lieut.-Col. Sanderson.

Fleasanton House, Brooklyn, 18th March, 1864.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

In order to relieve the minds of those who have a real interest in my welfare, allow me to say that I have been released from arrest, and am not on my way to Fort Warren, or any other prison.

As regards the charges brought against me, my friends, by their generous advocacy, have shown that they need no denial thereof; but to the public at large I would simply state, that they never had any foundation, save in the base imagination of one, who, having proven himself recreant to his country and his God, is eminently capable of any falsehood calculated to divert attention from his own shortcomings.

Although a momentary sufferer by the action of the military authorities, I am, nevertheless, proud to serve a Government which thus shows its determination to watch, with jealous eye, the conduct of its officers, whoever they may be; and shall have every cause of complaint removed if I am afforded an early opportunity of explaining my whole conduct as an officer and a gentleman, whilst in the hands of the enemy. Very respectfully,

Your obedient servant,

JAMES M. SANDERSON,

Lieutenant-Colonel and C. S., 1st Army Corps.

The Arkansas Election.

Little Rock, Ark., Friday, March 18.

Partial election returns from eleven counties give more votes than the whole number required by the President's Proclamation to replace Arkansas in the Union. The other counties, forty-three in number, will give fully 5,000 votes more. The new State Constitution framed by the last Convention was almost unanimously ratified, there being 50 for, only 137 votes against it. Arkansas is thus declared a free State in the Union by the voluntary action of its own citizens. Gov. Isaac Murphy, and the whole free State ticket is elected. Guerilla bands made violent threats, nevertheless the citizens were enthusiastic in their determination to vote the State back into the Union, many going to the polls at the risk of their lives. The military authorities used every exertion to protect voters.

From the Mississippi.

Cairo, Friday, March 18.

The steamer Continental, from New Orleans, the 10th inst., has arrived with the Twelfth Wisconsin and the Eleventh and Fifteenth Iowa veteran volunteers. The Twelfth Wisconsin Regiment disembarked here, the others go on to St. Louis.

An expedition composed of three brigades started from Vicksburgh just before the Continental left.

The Sixteenth Army Corps has left for the South, destination unknown.

Gen. Lee's cavalry, which followed Sherman's expedition on its return, had gone back into the interior.

New Orleans papers of the 10th and Memphis papers of the 16th are devoid of interest.

Large quantities of forage are coming into Cairo, and are daily examined by the Government inspectors, on account adulteration and of inferior quality.

Cairo, Thursday, March 17.

The Hospital steamer C. C. Wood, from Vicksburgh and Memphis, has arrived with three hundred and forty-nine sick and wounded troops, and left this morning for St. Louis. Eight died on the way up; among them Julius Reeves, of the Thirty-fifth New-Jersey Volunteers, who was buried at Helena.

The estimated force of the enemy in the recent fight at Yazoo City was 5,000 men, with 4 pieces of artillery. The Eighth Louisiana Volunteers (colored) lost 50 killed, wounded and missing; the First Mississippi Cavalry and the Eleventh Regiment, 38. Nine out of 15 officers of the Eighth Louisiana were found dead.

Serious Injury to a Distinguished Physician.—Prof. Henry G. Cox, M. D., of the New-York Medical College and Charity Hospital, met with a severe accident a few days since. He had stepped from his carriage to the sidewalk in Broadway, near Fourteenth-street, and was about to fasten his horse to a post, when the animal moved backward. In yielding to her restive movement, Dr. Cox stumbled over the stump of a tree, which the City Street Department for many months had negligently allowed to encumber the sidewalk, and falling heavily on his back, suffered a fracture of his thigh bone. Dr. Carnochan, and other eminent surgeons in attendance, consider the injury more than ordinarily severe, the break having occurred immediately below the hip-joint, and it will require many weeks of constant attention before Dr. Cox will be able to leave his bed, even if the effects of the injury should not prove permanent. The large number of Dr. Cox's professional and personal friends will learn of his mishap with deep regret.

The Late Collision in the Harbor.—The sinking of a boat belonging to the French man-of-war Phlegethon, by the steaming Arctic, by which two of the crew were drowned, has been noticed. It is alleged that the accident was caused by the criminal recklessness of the pilot and officers of the steamer. The Commander of the French corvette has claimed damages for the families of the drowned seamen. The following from the Commander of the Phlegethon appeared in yesterday's Courier des Etats Unis: "On the morning of the 15th instant, a boat from the French corvette Phlegethon, containing ten men, was run down by the tugboat Arctic. Two of the sailors were drowned; a few others of those who were saved were picked up by boats which put off from the shore. The Commander of the Phlegethon would be glad to know the names of the persons who manned those boats, that he might express to them his lively thanks. He would be happy, also, to know the name of the steamer which, happening to be near Castle Garden, came up at once with hats to the scene of the accident, under an impulse which does honor to its officers."

American Tract Society.—The financial year of this society closes April 1. The Committee desire its friends to know that the claims from the army and navy and freedmen, for whom the society has expended more than $100,000 since the war began, and from foreign lands, were never greater than now. Prompt and generous donations are much needed. One individual has just sent to the office $1,000, another $300, another $250. O. E. Kimsbury, Assistant Treasurer, No. 150 Nassau-street, New-York.

TESTIMONIAL FROM ONE OF THE MOST RESPECTABLE CITIZENS OF NEW-YORK.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.

No. 420 SIXTH-AV., NEW-YORK, Dec. 2, 1863.

I was deaf for several years, and hearing of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I was induced to place myself under his care, and I am now happy to state that my hearing was entirely restored after a short treatment. I was also suffering from chronic catarrh, of which I was also cured by the skillful treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg. I do but justice to the Doctor in stating that in treating me he displayed that skill and knowledge which have already procured for him such a deserved reputation, and that the principles which direct his system of curing Deafness and Catarrh are such as to render success certain, in my opinion. Many months have passed since Dr. Von Eisenberg restored my hearing, and it continues as good as ever.

O. HOPKINS.

READ NEW TESTIMONY OF CATARRH CURED.
CATARRH CURED.
READ!

I have been suffering for a long time from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery, and very painful. My nostrils were constantly obstructed with a pouring fluid. That frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, often attended with a fullness of my throat, great soreness, and a continual dropping. Dr. Von Eisenberg has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I may, indeed, say that I feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. Von Eisenberg is so skillful as it is successful. It is in my opinion impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. Von Eisenberg's care, with a certainty of being speedily cured.

HEAR.

HARLEM, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. Von Eisenberg operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

WILLIAM LIDDLE,
Harlem, 126th-st., between 2d and 3d-avs.

No. 128 ALLEN-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by almost eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

Consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. And have had an opportunity of comparing his modest treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his unlined restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain. JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 23, 1863.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. His with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull hearing in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills creeping over me with occasional hot flashes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, to much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

GRAY'S PATENT MOLDED COLLARS

have now been before the public for nearly a year. They are universally pronounced the neatest and best fitting collars extant.

The upper edge presents a perfect curve, free from the angles noticed in all other collars.

The cravat causes no puckers on the inside of the turn-down collar; they are as smooth inside as outside, and therefore perfectly free and easy to the neck.

The Gerotte Collar has a smooth and evenly finished edge on both sides.

These collars are not simply flat pieces of paper cut in the form of a collar, but are molded and shaped to fit the neck.

They are made in "Novelty" (or turn-down) style, in every half inch size from 13 to 17 inches, and in "Eureka" (or Gerotte) from 13 to 17 inches and packed in "odd sizes" in neat blue cartoons, containing 100 each; also, in smaller ones of 10 each—the latter a very handy package for travelers, army and navy officers.

Every collar is stamped
"GRAY'S PATENT MOLDED COLLARS."

THE CULTIVATION OF THE CRANBERRY is much more easy and successful in the common dry soil or private gardens, market gardens, or in field culture, than in the usual clumsy way in bogs and meadows. The yield this season, in my method of culture, was over 400 bushels per acre. Explicit directions for cultivation, with price of cranberry plants and all other useful and ornamental trees, plants and shrubs, will be sent by mail. Plants prepaid by mail.

BRANDRETH'S PILLS,

Which impart the tint of health to the complexion, brightness to the eyes, and cheerfulness and vigor to the whole frame.

S. T.—1860.—X.

Persons of sedentary habits troubled with weakness, lassitude, palpitation of the heart, lack of appetite, distress after eating, torpid liver, constipation, &c., deserve to suffer if they will not try the celebrated which are now recommended by the highest medical authorities, and warranted to produce an immediate beneficial effect. They are exceedingly agreeable, perfectly pure, and must supersede all other tonics where a healthy, gentle stimulant is required.

They purify, strengthen and invigorate.
They create a healthy appetite.
They are an antidote to change of water and diet.
They overcome effects of dissipation and late hours.
They strengthen the system and enliven the mind.
They prevent miasmatic and intermittent fevers.
They purify the breath and acidity of the stomach.
They cure Dyspepsia and Constipation.
They cure Diarrhœa and Cholera Morbus.
They cure Liver Complaint and Nervous Headache.
They make the weak strong, the languid brilliant, and are exhausted nature's great restorer. They are composed of the celebrated Calisaya bark, wintergreen, quassia, roots and herbs, all preserved in perfectly pure St. Croix rum. For particulars see circulars and testimonials around each bottle.

Beware of impostors. Examine every bottle. See that it has our private United States stamp unmutilated over the cork, with plantation scene, and our signature on a fine steel plate side label. See that our bottle is not refilled with spurious and deleterious stuff. Any person pretending to sell Plantation Bitters by the gallon or in bulk, is an impostor. Any person imitating the bottle, or selling any other material therein, whether called Plantation Bitters or not, is a criminal under the United States law, and will be so prosecuted by us. We already have our eye on several parties refilling our bottles, &c., who will succeed in getting themselves into close quarters. The demand for Drake's Plantation Bitters from ladies, clergymen, merchants, &c., is incredible. The simple trial of a bottle is the evidence we present of their worth and superiority. They are sold by all respectable druggists, grocers, physicians, hotels, saloons, steamboats and country stores.

A curious book for curious

LITERARY GOSSIP.

—Amidst the crowd of books that the present Shakespeare mania is giving birth to in England, there is probably no more attractive volume than Life Portraits of Shakespeare, with an Examination of the Authenticity and a History of the Various Representations of the Poet. By J. H. Friswell. It is the third book dedicated to the subject, but enjoys the advantages afforded by the new art of photography over the volumes of Boaden and Wivell, who are obliged to be content with engravings of the originals. The newest contribution to Shakespearian physiognomy brought forward in this book, is a portrait lately discovered at Stratford-on-Avon, and which, when cleared of a long beard, &c., that disguised it, offers a remarkable similarity to the monumental bust of Shakespeare, and is supposed by its partisans to be the original from whence that was sculptured. Beautiful photographs of this and all the other portraits that are considered to possess any claim to authenticity, are given, as well as charming views of Shakespeare's house, as now restored; Ann Hathaway's cottage at Shottery, and the interior of the chancel of the church at Stratford, where the poet lies buried. The text embraces all the literature of the subject, and brings forward a remarkable statement of discovery in Germany of an actual post-mortem cast from the face of Shakespeare. The story is a very old one now, though scarcely convincing in its present shape. The cast, or plaster, mask, of such high pretensions, is now in the possession of Prof. Owen, the great naturalist.

—Mr. C. Scribner is preparing for publication a fine library edition, in two large and handsome octavo volumes, of The History of Philosophy, Ancient and Modern, by Rev. F. D. Maurice. Distinguished for omnivorous learning, and a natural gift of eloquence that lends attraction to the most abstruse subject, Maurice's History of Philosophy is remarkable for its great familiarity with the original authorities of this eminent field of study, and for its strong human sympathies with the great minds who have sought for truth in all ages, unchecked by temporal or spiritual obstacles. There is no work in English on the subject that can be compared with it in richness and attractive treatment of a branch of study that must always be dear to reflective minds. To make the work more useful to students, it will be furnished with additional information, in the shape of notes, completing the object of the book, but not interfering with the author's text, by a gentleman well known by his translations of Cousin's Philosophy, and other works that show his fitness for the task.

—A prospectus lately printed by Messrs. Appleton & Co., gives notice of a work now preparing under their auspices that will be probably second to none existing in usefulness; and certainly for the immense labor intelligently employed in its production, is worthy of all praise. It is a Universal Dictionary of Proper Names, Biographical, Geographical, Mythological and Historical; and, in the compass of a single imperial octavo volume of some 2,000 pages, will be for geography, biography and history, what Webster's Dictionary is for the English language. The author, Dr. Eugene A. Thaly, assistant editor of the New American Cyclopædia, and the amount of labor and perseverance essential to collect and condense the facts relating to perhaps 100,000 names is something fearful to contemplate. The work has been a year in progress, but requiring at least double that time before it is ready for publication. It is understood that the great success of The New American Cyclopædia, as a commercial enterprise of the first class, has encouraged the spirited publishers to the production of the present work.

—The long projected new edition of Dr. Johnson's Dictionary, undertaken by Messrs. Longman, has at last received its definite shape, and No. 1 has just made its appearance. The style and title decided on is not complimentary to the great Doctor, who has shrunk from the principal author to the humbler position of one who furnishes merely a basis for other superstructure. It is published as A Dictionary of the English Language, by R. G. Latham, M. D., late Fellow of King's College, Cambridge, Author of the English Language, &c., founded on that of Dr. Samuel Johnson, in edited by Rev. H. J. Todd, with numerous emendations and additions. It will be completed in 36 monthly parts, forming 2 volumes quarto.

STATE SOVEREIGNTY.

Considered Historically, Constitutionally and Geographically.

NO. IV.

We had intended to devote the present number to another branch of our wide subject but would ask the reader's permission to dwell a little longer on the vital topic that preceded.

It could be shown that by no man have "the rights of the States," even on their own shallow theory, been more seriously assailed than by those who have made the loudest profession of being their special defenders. If we are a partnership merely, there could not be a more direct wrong to the non-consenting members, than the forcing upon them a new partner wholly foreign to the original articles. Such was the gross infringement of State rights in the annexation of Texas, and the still greater outrage proposed in the purchase of Cuba. Again, if each State is a sovereign what higher right could it possess than that of making citizens? But how contemptuously was this treated in the partisan Dred Scott decision? State-made citizenship was citizenship nowhere, whilst, to favor a sectional interest, that much lower thing, State-made property, though of a kind opposed to the ideas of the whole civilized world, was declared to be property everywhere. And so, too, of State representation in the United States Senate, of all others that feature in our Constitution which seems most purely Federal—how has it been assailed of late, because it seemed to favor New-England? We have seen this in the same newspaper column that was teeming with its intemperate advocacy of State rights. Such shocking inconsistency shows that the doctrine, as commonly held, never had any ground of principle, that it was never anything else than the handy weapon of a miserable party expediency.

But let us view the question in its higher and broader aspects. There are "rights of the States," doubtless, as there are also rights of cities and towns. Among them is one that stands out prominently—higher than all others, deeper than all others, more valuable than all others. It is the right of these States in one another. It is the right of each State in the whole, and in every other State. It is the right of each individual citizen of any one State in the whole, and in every other State. This is, indeed, a precious "State right," far more valuable, far more glorious than any claim of petty independence. Compared with this, what is the right of Vermont to be a tenth-rate sovereignty, establishing Custom-houses on the Connecticut and ports of entry on Lake Champlain?—what the right of Georgia to exercise a similar petty jurisdiction in the swamps of the Okefenokee, or of Ohio to possess the supreme imperium between the surveyor's lines, the artificial parallels, that mark her boundaries? What is such a sovereignty as this, taken at its highest estimate, to the right of each to be a member of this great free nation, sharing in all the good of its beneficent rule, its strong protection, its glorious destiny?

And so in regard to each individual inhabitant of any State, and the highest political good he could desire for his children, and his children's children, what should be dearer to him, politically, than this right of citizenship for him and them, in any portion of the United States—a right not given to him by his particular State, nor conventionally acquired for him by it, but coming down to him from an older and higher source, and which, therefore, his particular State can never, under any plea of allegiance to itself, take from him. It is a right inherited to the present inhabitants of these two additional States, from their fathers, who came more or less from all the States. It is much older than either Georgia or Ohio. It existed when one was a poor and sparse colony of swamps, and the other an uninhabited wilderness. Instead of being made by these States, it is not too much to say that it made them what they are, and what they would never have been without it. It is the oldest thing in this country. Coming from history, prescription, and old organic law, it is before the Federal Constitution, before the Articles of Confederation. It existed during the Revolutionary war, and before the Revolutionary war. Without it that war never would have been; without it this country never would have been, as united by an [illegible] tie. It was the principle of unity in the colonies, as well as in the present time. It goes back long, long ago—even beyond the period now more than a century past—when French and English armies were fighting all round the globe, and the prize of the contest was this very territorial unity for which we are now contending. It has never been surrendered, and surely it will not be surrendered, now that the bare wilderness for which they then fought so fiercely has become the abode of thirty millions. The loyal States are fighting for their own—fighting for it, too, it should ever be remembered, with men who came, in great measure, from the Northern hives, or who have acquired the place and power they possess in the South and Southwest, chiefly through this very right they are now seeking to destroy.

We ask pardon of the reader, if we have dwelt upon this at the hazard of some repetition. Its vast theoretical and practical importance, together with the fact of its having been so much overlooked in the national argument, constitutes our apology. We reason from the true and fundamental "State right" against the false and suicidal claim. It is this precious right which the demagogue doctrine of State sovereignty so seriously disturbs, and would ultimately destroy. We thus characterize the opposing heresy, because, from the beginning, in 1785 and 1786, it has ever been the favorite dogma of the worst party men. Some have advocated it, whose ability cannot be denied, however much we may question their political honesty; but the great secret of its power and spread among us, is its perfect accommodation to that numerous class of third and fourth rate politicians who desire small theatres for themselves, because they are not fitted for acting on the greater, or whose best mode for reaching the higher stage at all, is thought to be this demagogue favoring of the petty and the local, with a constant appeal to those habits of thought and feeling which are ever the stronger in proportion to their narrowness.

It is ever some sectional catchword varying with the times. Now it is "the sunny South," or "My Maryland," or "our own Carolina," or "the Old Dominion;" but once break down the national imperium, and these cries will descend still lower in the scale. The local will become still more local, the sectional appeal still more narrow. It will then be "Old Berkshire," or "Old Suffolk," or "Old Roanoke," or even "the Old Panhandle," according as any party interest can, for the moment, be promoted by any associations connected with such names. Now it is "State rights;" then it will be the rights of counties, cities, wards, all clamoring for the inherent right of self-government, and with as just a demand too, whether legal or natural, as any State can make to break out of our historical, national whole. Is it claimed that the States are historical? So also are some of the lesser divisions. Plymouth is older than Massachusetts; Jamestown, although now a decayed borough, is older, as a self-governing municipality, than Virginia; the City of New-York is older than the State; it received its charter then the latter had no known western or northern boundary.

These cries, though mischievous, have yet some local dignity. Now the sectional words are, "the chivalry of the South," "the bold sons of the West," as sometimes arrayed against "the canting Puritanism of the East." Let that other day come, and soon may we expect to hear of the rights of "the Jersey oystermen," or "the Chesapeake clam-gatherers," or "the free miners of Mauch-Chunk," or "the indomitable tar-burners of North Carolina," or last, though not least, "the unterrified Democracy of the Five Points." In proportion as all above grows loose, (as inevitably must be the case when the bending key of the arch is gone,) so surely would all below give way, and spread apart, sinking ever lower and lower to the level of smaller and meaner interests. The great national band is all that saves us from such a state of things; but this band has much to resist, and should, therefore, be of corresponding strength. The worst of all traitors, the greatest enemies of the true "State rights," have been those politicians who, for the past fifty years, have done all they could to weaken it, and now, unblushingly claim that they are the only men that can restore the national health. It is the very sublime of impudence, only equaled by that of the quack, who, after years of almost uninterrupted attendance, and when the patient seems to be in the very agonies of dissolution, should claim that he alone can cure him. Post hoc, propter hoc, (after this, on account of this,) is a poor rule for short periods; but give it time enough and it becomes an induction of almost absolute certainty. What is accountable for the corruption, the ignorance, the awful increase of crime that prevails in our greatest city? It is the political influence that has so long and so steadily ruled there. Who are accountable for our national troubles? It is the political party that, since the year 1800, with rare and brief intervals of interruption, has had its way and its will in the administration of our State and National Governments. If not, why not? What other cause or power could be put in competition with it as having a leading share in such effect? Surely this is fair reasoning, or it is in vain ever to attempt the drawing a conclusion from any inductive historical premises. Our sixty years' trial has every element of the strictest Baconian rule to make it a crucial experiment, conclusive of one result and excluding every other.

But this is taking us from our appointed course, though in itself a legitimate and instructive retrospection. The result to which we have alluded has been brought about mainly by this false cry of "State rights." It has given those who employed it a great advantage. There is, indeed, something good and natural in local attachments, and the party demagogue gains credit for seeming to address it; but beyond this, and wholly aside from this, the appeal he makes is to all that is most poor and sordid in human thinking. The popular heart, if left to itself, would ever be national; the grandeur of the idea would counteract the keen though narrow strength of local feeling. It is, however, very easily swayed by such cries as we have mentioned; and so the appeal to local, sectional prejudice, to State pride, ever stronger as it is narrower, has been the great party power. It was all the better instrument for such a purpose, inasmuch as it required but little mental ability for its successful employment. It was a very simple machine; any man could turn it who had the good luck or the low adroitness to get himself seated at the crank. It was a weapon easily found, and easily used for any temporary or partisan effect. Those who are just capable of wielding it are a numerous class, while men of a national stamp, like Washington, Hamilton, Madison, Clay and Webster, are of a much rarer occurrance. Hence we say the "State rights" doctrine has had the popular advantage in our party contests, and would ultimately prevail, even to the national dissolution, if there were not other and higher forces in the great currents of history to counteract it. In these currents we are now strongly borne; and hence it is a right time to take an observation, and see where we are moving and whence we have drifted, and by what rules and courses hereafter our voyage is to be conducted. In periods like these, if we may be allowed to change the metaphor, there is a search for foundations. We wish to know what there is beneath us. We wake up to see that there must be something deeper in our national idea, and in our national existence than is comprehended in this poor party dogma. We would not give up "State rights" by any means; but we begin to ask ourselves, what is the highest and most precious among them, and the answer comes back with a power unknown before. It is this right of each State, and of each member of each State, in every other State of our great national whole. When this is threatened by treason, we learn its inestimable value, not only in itself and its direct benefits, but also as the conservator of all inferior State rights. We are alarmed at the prospect of its loss, and we say: At any and every sacrifice that we can make, that loss shall be averted; this priceless citizenship shall go down to our children and our children's children. They shall not be "strangers to the commonwealth" of our American Israel, nor "to the covenant" of our American nationality. We will not leave them aliens—aliens to the rich inheritance of their fathers—aliens to one another.

"A work of this kind has been much needed in our high schools, which, in consequence of their rapid increase, have been obliged to employ teachers, who, though they may be good scholars, are often very deficient in a knowledge of this most useful rule. Your work is executed with a master's hand. I have seen nothing of the kind which will bear any comparison with it. The whole subject is well and thoroughly explained, so that pupils will find no difficulty in understanding it. I hope it will have a general introduction into all our schools."

The object of the Fair is to raise funds for the UNITED STATES SANITARY COMMISSION.

You know the prominent importance of the mission of mercy performed by this commission. Each battle-field, sadly but most earnestly, attests their invaluable services to the sick and wounded.

The return of Spring brings renewed action to our armies, and admonishes to make no effort to cheer, cherish and sustain our gallant defenders.

The appeal of the U. S. SANITARY COMMISSION for aid comes commended by its truth.

With the patriotic and the humane to supporting arguments it succeeds.

FROM ALBANY.

SECOND SESSION—NEW-YORK CITY RAILROADS—
The Oneida Lake Canal—An Excursion to New-York.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

ALBANY, Friday, March 18.

Local measures, so called, and an active lobby in each House, keep the Legislature decidedly awake, and sometimes render the chambers supposed to be exclusively devoted to legislation, little less than places of amusement. Somebody's local measure comes up in order, and the member or Senator, as the case may be, to whom it has been entrusted, speaks briefly in its support. Another member or Senator discovers an iniquitous design in the measure and exposes it, and a personal contest ensues between the friend and opponent of the bill. The House or Senate gradually become interested and join in the debate. An hour is consumed and almost invariably the measure is left without any action, other than reference to a committee. No one who has watched legislative proceedings will need to be informed that this case and exposition of local measures is not only justifiable, but unavoidable.

The New-York City street railroads continues to be the most exciting subject of legislation. The evening session, yesterday, in the Assembly, was a protracted wrangle over the Cross-town Railroad Bill. It was to no purpose that the Chairman of Committee of the Whole commanded, exhorted or entreated the House to be in order. Several members would insist on spending the time, or carrying forward the skirmishes and conversation. The list of corporators lead in the afternoon was again read, and it appeared that it was obtained from the authorized copy in the Secretary of State's Office, and that his certificate of correctness was attached to it. Everybody wished to know, and all at once, something about the list, and the numerous inquiries made confusion. The question before the Assembly meanwhile was upon striking out the word "assigns" from the bill; so that the company would not be allowed to sell their franchises to any one, they might choose, but would be required to keep it in the possession of the corporators.

Members expressed the opinion that there was something covered up in the bill, and demanded that the real parties who were to construct the road should be compelled to appear if any great was to be given. Mr. PEASE, of Brooklyn, was confident that the promis concealed in the bill, but opposition to it was made by the powerful railroad corporations already in existence in New-York City. He desired to offer amendments to the bill when the proper time should arrive, and hopes that when amended it would pass. Mr. BAUMGER thought no wrong was intended in the bill; but that it would be well to strike out the word "assigns." Mr. RYAN spoke at length and made some very good points against the bill. The bill was finally, at a late hour of the evening, recommitted to the Committee of the Whole, to be perfected and report upon at any time when perfected.

It would at the least be impolitic to do more than allude to the threats of political exclusion or offers of preferment that are assumed by those pushing these railroad bills, to be connected with the votes given for or against them. Political preferment is a more powerful bribe than money.

The Mayor's bill which provides that New-York City railroads shall pay ten per cent. of their gross receipts into the City Treasury, was argued before the Senate Committee yesterday afternoon. Messrs. CHAPMAN and SPEED spoke in favor of the bill, and Mr. DARLING, President of the Third-avenue Railroad Company, and his attorney, Mr. PERRY, opposed the bill, showing that it would prove destructive to their road if passed, or would at least render its operation a matter of doubtful advantage to the Company.

Oswego and Buffalo had a sharp contest in the Senate this morning. Oswego favors repealing the locks on the Oneida Lake Canal, for it would add much to the commerce of that city. Buffalo opposes the project, and terms the canal a sheepjike. The quarrel is ancient and respectable one. To-day, the Senate, after a protracted debate, recommitted the bill to committee, and passed a resolution, asking for information on the subject from the canal board, and the State Engineer and the Auditor.

The Assembly has passed a resolution, requesting an invitation to visit New-York City, making the trip on the new steamer St. John. They propose to leave Albany at six o'clock P. M., on Saturday next (to-morrow), and to leave New-York on their return at six o'clock P. M. of Monday. It is to be hoped that Broadway will be inspected with a view to the construction or extension of a street railroad.

Splendid Testimonial to Commodore Rodgers.

The contractors engaged in building an iron-clad vessel of war, and many of our most respectable citizens, who appreciate the noble qualities of mind, and the admiral professional ability of Commodore JOHN RODGERS, have just procured for him a testimonial of their good will, which reflects alike credit on their generosity and good taste. A magnificent silver service, including a splendid tea service, has just been completed at the establishment of WEEKS GAILS & SONS, Broadway, which is to be presented to the Commodore, on Wednesday next. Commodore RODGERS is now in this City, waiting the completion of the great ocean iron-clad Dictator, to command which he has been specially appointed by the Secretary of the Navy. He has been loosely connected with our iron-clad fleet since its organization. After the famous fight at Fort Darling, he was detached from the Galena and ordered to the Washington. On his way to Port Royal in this vessel he cut loose from the convoy and went light out to sea during a most terrible hurricane. He subsequently led the attack on Sumter, and captured the rebel iron-clad Atlanta. These acts have added the testimonial referred to. It consists of the following pieces:

One large silver, one punch-bowl and ladle, one cream pitcher, one sugar and pickles, one tea set of splendid articles, consisting of five pieces, one pitcher and two goblets, two ice-cream stands and tureen. On the large silver is the following inscription:

Testimonial
to Commodore John Rodgers,
For his gallant conduct and scientific ability in capturing the Rebel Ram "Atlanta," while in command of The Monitor Weehawken,
On June 17, 1863.

The articles comprising the testimonial cost about $2,500, and are splendid specimens of mechanical skill. It is said that the presentation will be made by Hamilton Fish, of Boston, one of the largest contractors in the country. Parties wishing to see the articles can do so at the establishment before named.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

SCIENCE IN THE FIELD.

Scientific medical preparations of Prof. W. W. DICKERSON, M. D., late Professor in the Philadelphia Medical College.

PERISTALTIC PERSUADERS.

Purely vegetable pills; peristaltic action, no drastic effect, which should be avoided. The only suitable family medicine extant, harmless under any system of diet or condition of exposure, acting surely and mildly, and saving the stomach, liver and bowels in a natural and healthy condition. To dyspeptics they are invaluable.

IMPERIAL COUGH PILLS.

If you suffer from a cough, it is your own fault. A trial of these pills will convince you of that fact. They decompose the pulegm, and subdue all inflammation. It is the best compound ever put together for colds, catarrh, asthma, spitting of blood and consumption. All afflicted with coughs, from whatever cause—even children with worms—can be cured by their use.

MAGMA.

The most extraordinary liniment ever produced or elaborated by science or experience for neuralgia, white swelling, swelling of the joints, neck, breast, arms, or elsewhere, lumbago, sore throat, erysipelas, gout, inflammation of all kinds, nervous affections, ulcers of every character; diseases of the skin, such as tetter, ringworm, itch, &c., &c.; bites of venomous animals, stings of reptiles and insects, fresh wounds, external poisons, also burns and scalds.

MIASCETUM.

A purifier and tonic combined, without alcohol, which as a base for other compounds than tinctures, many of which are of doubtful efficacy, is destructive of health. The Miascetum acts upon the stomach in such a manner as conclusively to neutralize the effects of miasmatic, malarious and all other impure or deleterious atmospheric influences upon health. It invariably corrects the morbid condition of the stomach, imparts renewed vigor to every function of the human system, is a sure preventative of fever and ague, all other biliary derangements, and a reliable protection from the diseases of tropical climates.

HUILE D'OR,
(Oil of Gold.)

Unequaled for preserving, restoring and beautifying the hair. The result of theoretical and practical knowledge of its anatomy, and physical economy and comprehensive adaptation of combination to effects, which is to prevent or remove all diseases of the scalp, and upon that only sound basis, raise the perfect superstructure of health and beauty; to separate which, and preserve either, will be as impracticable as to invest a Hebian tree with the charms of foliage.

A WOMAN'S RANSOM.
SECOND EDITION.

This new and fascinating English novel, the first edition of which was taken by the Boston booksellers, is now in the second hundred thousand.

The Commercial Bulletin, a live Boston paper, whose literary criticisms are always able and impartial, after a thorough reading of the book, says:

"It is an effort of real genius in the right direction, which does honor to the name of the honest man, the head of the author. The incidents connected with the story are at once grand, simple and natural, and worked up with such a master hand as to render them highly effective. The interest of the story is not merely sustained, but intensified from beginning to end; there is no place in which it flags for a moment, or where the reader is satisfied to pause and breathe his exhausted breath, or recover his equal. Not merely his curiosity, but his strongest sympathies are irresistibly drawn out, and he becomes an active partisan in the doubtful struggle progressed between the champions of virtue and innocence and the lovers of crime and vice."

ONE LARGE 12MO. VOLUME. PRICE $1 50.

A WOMAN'S RANSOM

ELEMENTS OF MILITARY ART AND HISTORY.

BY EDWARD DE LA BARRE DUPARCQ, Chef de Bataillon of Engineers in the Army of France, and Professor of the Military Art in the Imperial School of St. Cyr. Translated by Brig.-Gen. Geo. W. CULLUM, U. S. A., Chief of the Staff of Major-Gen. H. W. Halleck, General-in-Chief United States Army. 1 vol., octavo, cloth. $4.

I read the original a few years since, and considered it the very best work I had seen upon the subject. Gen. Cullum's ability and familiarity with the technical language of French military writers, are a sufficient guarantee of the correctness of his translation.

UNIVERSAL
AND HAIR DRESSING

The RESTORER will certainly cause the hair to grow where there is baldness. It matters not how long they have been bald, or what caused the hair to fall out.

We have the names of ladies and gentlemen to whom we are at liberty to refer, who were bald from 10 to 22 years, all of whom have now a very thickly covered head of hair.

It will stop the hair from falling out in a very short time, sometimes in one week.

IT NEVER HAS FAILED IN HUNDREDS OF CASES TO RESTORE GRAY HAIR UPON THE HEAD OR WHISKERS TO THEIR ORIGINAL YOUTHFUL COLOR.

That you may not be deceived, it has generally taken from two to six bottles to accomplish the object, and if used according to directions, I would not hesitate to warrant it.

It will eradicate and prevent scurf, dandruff, &c., and cure itching of the head, headache, and scald head, and make the head feel delightfully cool and refreshing.

The HAIR DRESSING needs but one trial to admit, as all who have tried it do, that it has no equal for making the hair dark, soft, glossy and beautiful, disposing it to remain in any desired position, and keeping the scalp clean and healthy as its dose.

It is all that can be desired for dressing ladies', gentlemen's or children's hair.

Price of Restorer, $1 per bottle; or, 6 bottles for $5.
Price of Dressing, 50 cents per bottle; or, 4 bottles for $2 00.

CHICAGO AND GREAT EASTERN RAILWAY COMPANY,
FIRST MORTGAGE BONDS,
FOR $2,000,000.
SUBSCRIPTION BOOKS OPENED WITH
Messrs. SCHUCHARDT & GERHARD, Bankers,
No. 21 Nassau-st., New-York.
The Chicago and Great Eastern Railway Company now offer for sale one million two hundred thousand dollars of their first mortgage bonds, in sums of one thousand dollars each, maturing in thirty years, bearing interest at the rate of Seven per cent. per annum, payable in the City of New-York, on the first days of April and October, in each year.
These bonds are secured by a first and only Mortgage on the property, income and franchises of the Railway Company, executed to Frederick Schuchardt and Henry Gerhard, of the City of New-York, Trustees.
The remaining nine hundred thousand dollars of the bonds are to be issued and remain in the hands of the said Trustees, for the purpose of being exchanged for the Income Bonds of the Chicago and Great Eastern Railroad Company, running from La Grange to Logansport; this effected, the bonds will form a First and only mortgage on a line of road 112 miles in length, extending from Chicago to Logansport, where it connects with the Cincinnati and Chicago Airline Railroad, forming the shortest line by 40 miles between Chicago and Cincinnati, and by 80 miles the shortest line between Louisville and Chicago.
It will also open, in connection with roads now in operation, entirely new and very direct lines from Chicago to New-York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and all Eastern points. The distance from Chicago to New-York by this route being shorter than by either of the existing lines via Dunkirk or Buffalo.
The road is now under contract, and the most strenuous efforts are being made to have it open for traffic during the Summer of 1864.
The interest on the Bonds maturing during the progress of the work has been provided for, and will remain on deposit with the Bankers of the Company, Messrs. SCHUCHARDT & GERHARD, No. 21 Nassau-st., to whom the Company refer for further particulars, and where subscription books for the loan have been opened.

MUSICAL.

CHICKERING & SONS
MANUFACTURERS OF GRAND, SQUARE, AND UPRIGHT PIANO-FORTES. No. 652 Broadway.—The superiority of these instruments has of late been amply demonstrated by the voluntary testimony of the foremost artists of the day, who claim for them excellencies of tone and workmanship hitherto unobtained by any other makers.
Mr. GOTTSCHALK'S constant use of the NEW SCALE CHICKERING GRAND PIANO-FORTES has severely tested their musical qualities, and resulted in establishing the justice of the very flattering estimation in which they are held.

STEINWAY & SONS'
GOLD MEDAL GRAND AND SQUARE PIANOS are now considered the best in Europe as well as this country, having received the first Prize Medal at the World's Exhibition in London, 1862.
The principal reason why the Steinway Pianos are superior to all others, is, that the firm is composed of five practical pianoforte makers, (father and four sons,) who invent all their improvements, and under whose personal supervision every part of the instrument is manufactured. MASON & HAMLIN'S CABINET ORGANS, FOR FAMILIES, CHURCHES AND SCHOOLS—Recognized by the musical profession as greatly superior to Harmoniums, Melodeons, and other small organs. (See our Illustrated catalogue for explicit testimony to their superiority, from a majority of the most eminent organists in America.) Prices, $85 to $500 each.
CAUTION TO PURCHASERS.—The great reputation which our Cabinet Organs have obtained, and the extensive demand for them, have induced dealers to advertise, in some cases, quite different instruments as Cabinet Organs, and in others to represent to purchasers that Harmoniums and other reed organs are the same thing. This is not true. The excellences of our Cabinet Organs, which have given them their high reputation, are the result not merely of the superiority of their workmanship, but also, in large measure, of essential differences in construction, which, being patented, cannot be imitated by other makers. From these arise their better quality and volume of tone and unrivaled capacity for expression. Warerooms in New-York, No. 7 Mercer-st.
